Hearings Set This Week On Port Plan For Patuxent

Benedict Studied As Engineers Seek Channel to Take Ocean-Going Ships

Does the Washington area need a deep-water port, with a channel big enough to handle ocean-going vessels?

This question has been raised periodically since the days when Washington was suitable as a port for ocean traffic, back when sailing vessels docked in the Potomac at Georgetown.

Only a year ago, the Army's Engineer Corps answered "no" to this question—insofar as the Potomac River was concerned as a needed, practical and "paying" deep-water channel between Washington and Chesapeake Bay.

This week, the issue turns up again, with the Patuxent River as the prospective channel involved.

On Friday, October 15, a hearing will be held in the offices of the District Engineer, to help determine the advisability of establishing a deep-water port at Benedict, Md., on the Patuxent River, with a suitable channel to the mouth of the Patuxent at Chesapeake Bay.

In Lieu of Facilities Here

Col. Henry C. Wolfe, District Engineer for the Army's Corps of Engineers, announced the hearing would be held under provisions of the River and Harbor Act of 1946, to consider Benedict "as a deep-water port in lieu of the development of similar facilities at Washington, D. C."

The District Engineer's office emphasized that it has no pro or con views in the matter, but is following its duty of carrying out the congressional mandate to investigate.

Improvement of navigational facilities in this area have often become confused in the public mind through various proposals for port, harbor, channel and waterfront works.

Channel Work Under Way

One major program under way here is the Washington channel improvement program, which involves improvements solely for facilities on the north side of the Washington Channel, which is the waterway between East Potomac Park and Maine ave.

This embraces construction of three yacht basins, five piers and miscellaneous bulkhead walls. Two of the yacht basins, those nearest the 14th st. bridge, have been completed, plus one pier and the substructure of another. Remainder of the work is being done as appropriations permit.

Second major waterway program concerns general improvement of the Potomac and Anacostia Rivers and adjacent waters in and near the District—known as the Washington Harbor program.

Under this plan, there would be extensive work in all the channels involved, and general improvement of facilities for motorboats and sailboats of all kinds, seaplane bases, commercial facilities, etc. A sum

Auto Gray Market Probe Brings 200 Area Complaints

More than 200 complaints from automobile buyers have been received by the House group probing the gray market in cars in Greater Washington, John T. M. Reddan, counsel for the House Subcommittee Investigating Questionable Trade Practices, revealed yesterday.

So much material has been accumulated, Reddan said, it has been necessary to increase the investigating staff.

Main complaints, he said, have charged undervaluation by dealers of trade-in cars; refusal of dealers to sell new cars unless the customer trades in a used car, and holding of deposits too long.

"Definite results" can be expected within three weeks, by which time the subcommittee will know if public hearings "are indicated,' Reddan said.

Braves' 6-Run 7th Beats Cleveland, 11-5

Cleveland, Oct. 10.—The Braves broke out of their shackles today, turned with aroused fury on the Cleveland Indians, and sent the World Series rolling 700 miles back to Boston for a sixth game.

Out of the shadow of doom came the Braves to deluge Bob Feller with home runs and humiliate a Cleveland club that was poised to exterminate them from the series, Score, 11 to 5.

The awakening of the Braves was to the accompaniment of the noise-making of the largest crowd ever to see a baseball game, with 86,288 unhappy Cleveland fans crammed into the Municipal Stadium premises for what was to be their day of woe.

As the bug-eyed multitudes watched with an amazement that gave way to dismay, Bob Elliott led the Braves in violent attack against Feller with a three-run homer in the first inning and single-run homer in the third before they finally drove him out in the seventh.

When their home runs couldn't quite clinch the victory and the Braves' brave stand appeared in

Right to Limit Video Viewers Called Valid

Attorney Predicts Court Ruling on Televisers' Claims

New York, Oct. 10 (AP).—Television broadcasts have the legal right to forbid the showing of their programs in taverns, theaters or other public places, according to an article in the Columbia Law Review.

The author is David M. Solinger, New York attorney who specializes in the radio and advertising fields. He predicts the courts will decide in the near future "whether a telecaster may limit, restrict and control what he originates."

Television broadcasters have claimed the rights to which Solinger says they are legally entitled. Most stations open and close with announcements saying the broadcasts are intended only for viewing on receivers of the type made for home use, at places at which no admission, cover or mechanical operating charges are made.

But there has been so far no clearcut court test of these rights.

Solinger says television is protected by statutory and common law copyrights as well as by other common law property rights.

Driverless Auto Kills Its Owner

Pulaski, Va., Oct. 10 (AP).—Mrs. Dorothy Ellen Mitchell's own automobile, without a driver, struck and killed her today at her Pulaski County farm.

The driverless automobile ran down the hill and struck her.

Thousands Flee Homes In Italian Earthquake

Ferrara, Italy, Oct. 10 (U.P.).—Thousands of residents fled their homes in panic here yesterday when two strong earthquake shocks jarred people out of their beds and caused the church roof to collapse. Police said there were no casualties.

Jews to Ignore U. N. Orders if Not Consulted

Imply Israel Is Unheard on Arab Truce Complaints

Tel Aviv, Oct. 10 (NYHT).—The Israeli government informed the United Nations central truce commission today that henceforth it would not recognize the commission's decisions unless Jewish officials were consulted in advance.

While skirmishes flared around southern Jerusalem and north of Latrun, Jews gave voice to their oft-repeated dissatisfaction with the commission's decisions regarding truce violations. A letter to Dr. Paul Mohn, U. N. representative at Tel Aviv, implied that the commission was upholding Arab truce complaints without first hearing the Jewish side.

In Jerusalem, Jews declared Arabs were shelling the southern suburbs after continuing sporadic sniper fire throughout the night.

50 Autos Light Landing Field For Lost Fliers

Bradford, Pa., Oct. 10 (AP).—The citizens of Bradford tonight helped two fliers lost in the darkness above the city to reach a safe landing.

The small plane, piloted by Tyler E. Leslie, of Port Allegany, had been circling the city for more than an hour, unable to find Mount Alton Airport which has no landing lights.

Airport authorities contacted police who put it up to the townspeople.

Fifty motorists lent their cars and the headlights were flashed on the runway to form a path of light. Another plane was sent into the air to guide the distressed ship to the lighted field.

A few minutes later, Tyler, and his passenger, Deforrest McDowell, also of Port Allegany, landed.

Red Feather Sermons Urge Generosity in Chest Campaign

Churchmen in the Greater Washington area yesterday urged support of the 1949 Community Chest Federation drive at Red Feather Sunday services in Protestant and Catholic churches.

Today the first report of progress in the drive for $4,566,790 will be made at a luncheon at 12:30 p. m. in the Hall of Nations at the Washington Hotel.

Total number and dollar value of all contributions received by nine soliciting units up to 10 a. m. today will be announced at the luncheon, according to Chauncey G. Parker, general campaign chairman.

In a Red Feather Sunday message to all Catholics of the Washington Archdiocese, Archbishop Patrick A. O'Boyle appealed for generous and wholehearted support of the drive by all Catholics.

He pointed out that many Catholic charitable organizations and institutions have been helped by the Chest federation, and stated that the goal established will meet only the minimum needs of Red Feather agencies.

At Catholic churches in Virginia, a message from the Most Rev. Peter L. Ireton, Bishop of Richmond, was read.

"An index of the intensity of our Catholic life can be found in the extent of our practice of the spiritual and corporal works of mercy toward those of the household of the Faith and to all our neighbors," he wrote. "The Community Chest gives all of us an

Economists Expect Fairly Steady 1949

Forecasts Based On Studies Made By Agriculture Department, SEC

By The Associated Press

A fairly steady level of economic activity in 1949 was forecast yesterday by economists of the Agriculture Department.

They said spending by private business may ease off somewhat, but that this will be offset by an increase in Government spending. These forecasts were made in a report by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics after a study of the farm outlook in general.

In another economic report, the Securities and Exchange Commission reported that United States individuals saved in liquid form—readily convertible into cash—an estimated 900 million dollars in the second quarter of 1948.

"While this was less than half the amount saved in liquid form in the same quarter of 1947, total individuals' savings was at about the same level taking into consideration savings in forms such as purchases of homes and durable consumer goods," the SEC said.

The Agriculture bureau said that consumers are showing a tendency to return to "more normal" spending habits. It expected them to continue such a course next year.

"Deferred demands for shoes, textiles and some durable goods have been largely met," it said. "However, shortages of several major products, particularly automobiles and houses, still exist."

The bureau said substantial amounts of foreign aid and the growing rate of Government spending for defense afford considerable assurance for a high level of demand, at least for the first half of the year.

It said there is a possibility that Government spending may cause some further price inflation.

But any price advances, it added, are likely to be limited to non-farm products. It predicted farm prices will average slightly lower than this year's.

"Farmers' net income probably will be off for the second straight year," the bureau said. "The outlook for a decline in the net income stems from the fact that farmers' gross income is leveling off while many production expenses are continuing upward."

It is unlikely, however, the bureau said, that cash receipts from farm marketings for 1949 will be more than 10 per cent below the 30 billion dollars estimated for this year.

The Securities Commission, in its report, said that a quarterly survey of private savings habits and trends disclosed:

1—In-the-pocket currency and bank deposits of individuals were up 200 million dollars over the first three months of the year.

2—Private investments in securities increased about 300 million dollars during the period and a similar amount was added to individuals' investments in savings and loan associations.

3—Savings through insurance and pensions showed the greatest increase—a whopping $1,800,000,000 in the April-June months.

But the SEC survey also showed that Americans are going further into debt. Increases in liquid assets were more than matched by in-

Dewey Reassures 'Free World' U.S. Unity Remains Unshaken; Truman Resumes Campaign

President Starts 6-Day, 6-State Dash After Setback Due To Vinson Episode

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Aboard Truman Special, Oct. 10.—His campaign set back by crossed foreign affairs signals, President Truman tonight launched a new drive to catch up with the fleet-footed Thomas E. Dewey.

His 17-car special pulled out of Union Station tonight on the first leg of a six-State, six-day dash designed to cut back Republican majorities in Congress and shake Dewey's firm lead in the Midwest.

The President scheduled an open-armed appeal for labor's vote in Akron Monday night. Aboard his train is Jack Kroll, director of CIO-PAC which has already indorsed Mr. Truman. Kroll will speak just ahead of Mr. Truman at the Akron rally.

Kroll Predicts Gains

Kroll predicted the Democrats, with labor's help, will pick up congressional seats in the Dayton, Canton and Toledo districts, elect Frank J. Lausche in Ohio's nip-and-tuck governorship race, and even swing the State for Truman.

Former Governor James M. Cox, 1920 Democratic standard-bearer, will meet the President at Dayton. Presented by Cox, Mr. Truman will address a late morning rally in Dayton's Memorial Hall.

In passing, he may pay his compliments Monday morning to Senator Robert A. Taft, Mr. Truman's pet GOP whipping boy, and UMW Chief John L. Lewis, who loosed a bitter tirade at the President last week.

Cincinnati First Stop

Mr. Truman's first stop, bright and early Monday morning, will be in Cincinnati, Ohio, Senator Taft's home town. There also, by just a coincidence, he will briefly occupy a suite in the Netherlands Plaza Hotel, directly under one held by Mr. Lewis.

Democrats were plainly more worried about the campaign effect of the President's mission to Moscow mixup than they were over any accidental meeting between Messrs. Truman and Lewis, or even a possible mass razzing by the 3000 UMW delegates in convention in Cincinnati.

Some compared his Marshall-short-circuited proposal to send Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson to see Stalin to his 1946 on-and-off signals with Henry A. Wallace, later ousted from his Cabinet for a Truman approved Madison Square Garden "two-worlds" speech.

Byrnes Role Weakened

The 1946 mix-up had the effect of weakening former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes' role in Paris. But its campaign effect was just as deep, probably ranking next to the meat shortage as a contributory factor to the 1946 Democratic lacing at the polls.

Some Democratic leaders, who were beginning to think Mr. Truman had succeeded in his No. 1 objective—getting Democrats

In Tense Berlin Crisis

Vandenberg Calls Vinson Plan A 'Narrow Escape' for U. S.

New York, Oct. 10 (AP).—Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) said tonight that the United States "just had a narrow escape" from "independent action" on the tense Berlin situation.

President Truman yesterday announced that he had abandoned a plan to send Chief Justice Fred Vinson to Moscow for a talk with Russian Premier Stalin.

Vandenberg referred to what he described as a "recent dangerous hour," and added that he was thinking "obviously of Berlin."

Then he added:

"Now that we have gone to the United Nations, we must intelligently avoid any unilateral, independent action on our own account, lest we confuse our friendly associates, cramp the Security Council and encourage our opponents to think our appeal to the United Nations is either timid or insincere."

Then he said:

"I must say that we have just had a narrow escape upon this score, at Washington."

Vandenberg's statement was in a speech prepared for delivery on receiving the 1948 freedom award for "leading the United American people in the service of a free world."

The award was made by Freedom House, an organization aimed at increasing international goodwill.

In a companion speech, Economic Cooperation Administrator Paul G. Hoffman said Europe's drive for swift economic recovery under the Marshall Plan is succeeding "admirably" despite Soviet resistance.

Hoffman repeated a speech delivered in a CBS broadcast. He said Russia exposed her position with "horrible clarity" when she and her associates pulled out of the recovery program at the start.

In his talk, Vandenberg, Senate Foreign Affairs Committee head, said:

"We are in Berlin by right. We shall not be driven out. We shall not negotiate under duress."

"But," he continued, "if there is any reciprocity answering our will for peace, there is every reason why the Security Council

Marshall Sees Forrestal, Perhaps on Arms for West

By The Associated Press

Secretary of State Marshall and Defense Secretary Forrestal conferred at the State Department yesterday, presumably reviewing American armed strength in the light of the Nation's foreign policy.

Another subject which may have come up at the meeting in Marshall's State Department office is the problem of supplying arms to the Western European Union countries.

The State and Defense departments are only now beginning the preparation of a detailed program to be submitted to the President and, if he approves, to Congress sometime early next year.

Marshall talked with Forrestal, Undersecretary of State Lovett, and other foreign policy and defense officials yesterday after winding up with President Truman the business that brought him flying home from Paris Saturday and caused the President to cut short a political campaign trip in New York State.

White House officials said Marshall called on the President again yesterday. What they talked about was not disclosed. It was assumed goodbys were said before Mr. Truman's campaign and Marshall's return to Paris separated them again.

Marshall plans to take off for Paris again today at an hour which State Department officials said would be announced later. On Saturday, he said he might begin his

Mackenzie King Too Ill to Attend Dominions Parley

London, Oct. 10 (AP).—Canadian Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King is ill with influenza and will be unable to attend the Dominions Conference opening Monday.

Political, economic and defense problems of the British Empire are to be studied at the conference, first of its kind since the war.

An announcement by Canada House said the 73-year-old prime minister's blood circulation is "causing concern" and that his physician had ordered a complete rest. His condition was aggravated by an attack of influenza and the strain of public affairs, the announcement said.

The Canadian leader, who has indicated he will retire this fall, arrived Wednesday from the United Nations meetings in Paris.

Churchill's Blast at Reds Castigated

Rhymney, Wales, Oct. 10 (AP).—Health Minister Aneurin Bevan said today Winston Churchill's bitterly anti-Russian speech yesterday "does deadly harm."

"It can be regarded only as a national and international calamity," said the outspoken cabinet member. "He has ventured to make observations about the international situation which might give rise to the gravest possible misunderstanding."

Bevan called Churchill "one of the most reckless speakers in British political history." He said the Russians would read the former prime minister's address to a Conservative Party political conference "against the background of 1920 because Churchill was the man who attempted to murder the Russian Revolution within a few years of its birth."

The minister described Churchill as the "leader of a party which sold European peace in 1938 and connived at Hitler's rise to power."

Konni Zilliacus, leftwing Labor member of Parliament, also castigated Churchill in a speech to his constituency at Gateshead, in the northeast English coal mining area.

Transplantations Of Hearts a Success

London, Oct. 10 (U.P.).—A Soviet scientist has experimented successfully with heart transplantations in both warm and cold-blooded animals, the Moscow radio said today.

The broadcast said Prof. Nikolai Sinitsin of the Gorky Medical Institute reported in a recent book, "Heart Transplantation," that he replaced the heart of one frog with another heart, and added a second heart to another frog, and that both frogs survived.

Cuba's New President Orders Retail Prices Cut 10 Per Cent

Havana, Oct. 10 (U.P.).—Carlos Prio Socarras became President of Cuba today and began his regime by proclaiming an immediate 10 per cent cut in retail prices and promising further vigorous action to fight inflation.

The 45-year-old leader of the Cuban Revolutionary Party was inaugurated at noon in a brief formal ceremony witnessed by hundreds of Cuban and foreign diplomatic leaders.

The new President delivered his first message to Congress at a special session beginning at 9 p. m. He told the legislators that "as a result of direct negotiations with distributors... the price of consumer goods will be lowered 10 per cent... effective Monday."

Prio received tremendous applause as he added that the price slash "is not the only step I will take" to lower the soaring cost of living.

He gave no details of his further economic plans except to say that "in addition to lowering sales prices in the Cuban market, we must buy what we import under the most advantageous price conditions."

CARLOS PRIO SOCARRAS

Prio also proposed other domestic reforms, including the establishment of a national bank, the enactment of a civil service law and the setting up of labor courts.

In the field of foreign affairs, the new President said Cuba stands firmly on the side of the western democracies against "dictatorships of all types, which oppress and exploit millions."

He asked Congress to adopt laws providing "severe punishment for all who assail the national dignity."

Prio shared the rostrum in the reception salon of the presidential palace with Ramon Grau San Martin, his 'political mentor" and predecessor in office.

Guillermo Alonso Pujol, 49-year-old political veteran, was sworn in as vice president.

Campaign Speeches Reported

'Voice of America' Tells World Truman Lags Behind Dewey

By the United Press

The State Department's Voice of America has been telling the world that President Truman is lagging behind Gov. Thomas E. Dewey in the presidential campaign race, it was disclosed yesterday.

An analysis of the political situation beamed to Western Europe and Communist-controlled Eastern Europe said it is "the consensus of professional public opinion samples" that Dewey "holds a substantial lead over the President.

"But," it went on, "nothing is certain—least of all an election in a democratic country."

The script, broadcast three weeks ago, indicated the Voice previously had suggested that Mr. Truman definitely was the underdog.

"As most listeners know," it said, "the consensus of the experts in the United States is that Mr. Dewey enters this phase of the campaign with a considerable advantage over his opponent."

It attributed this to the Southern rebellion by States' Rights Democrats and to anticipated inroads by Henry A. Wallace's Progressive Party in Democratic strongholds in big industrial cities.

Officials emphasized that the voice is going all out in an effort not to take sides in the campaign and therefore is presenting only a factual, down-the-middle report.

There has been no "analysis" since the one three weeks ago, but day-by-day reports are made of campaign speeches by the candidates.

The other principal presidential

Governor Seeks To Offset Damage Of Peace Project, Called 'Blunder'

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 10.—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, in a move that was perhaps without precedent in American history, sought tonight to counteract the damage done by what is regarded here as a tragic blunder—President Truman's now discarded plan to send Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson on a new mission to Moscow.

Governor Dewey, supremely confident that he will be the next President, issued a statement to reassure Britain, France and other nations outside of the Iron Curtain that the American people "are in fact united in their foreign policy."

He wanted the nations of "the free world" to know, too, that the American people wholeheartedly and vigorously support the effort that is now being made in Paris to put an end to Soviet Russia's blockade of Berlin.

Consults Vandenberg, Dulles

The Republican presidential nominee drafted his statement after being in touch with John Foster Dulles, his representative at Paris, and United States Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

He then read it to reporters who were summoned to the executive mansion here in Albany, six hours before the "Dewey Victory Special" was to roll out on the campaign trail again.

The statement follows:

"The people of America wholeheartedly and vigorously support the labors of our bipartisan delegation at Paris and specifically its insistence on a prompt lifting of the blockade of Berlin.

"The nations of the world can rest assured that the American people are in fact united in their foreign policy, and will firmly and unshakeably uphold the United Nations and our friends of the free world in every step to build and preserve the peace."

Will Keep Him in Paris

This was all that Governor Dewey would authorize for quotation except for his answer to a question about Dulles. When a reporter wanted to know whether he would keep Dulles in Paris, he replied, "certainly."

The plan of the President to send Chief Justice Vinson to Moscow to confer with Premier Stalin—a plan that was dropped after Mr. Truman talked to Secretary of State Marshall—was the chief topic of conversation in the Dewey camp today.

Fascists, Police Battle on Eve Of Graziani Trial

Rome, Oct. 10 (AP).—Demonstrators waving black flags and singing Fascist songs surged through Rome tonight on the eve of the war crimes trial of the one-time fascist hero, Marshal Rodolfo Graziani. He is accused of having collaborated with the Germans after the Italians surrendered.

Police chased the demonstrators from one square to another throughout downtown Rome. They wielded rubber truncheons and arrested those who disobeyed orders to move on.

Deputy Giorgio Almirante, head of the openly pro-fascist Italian Social Movement (MSI), was scheduled to speak but he did not appear because police refused to allow the demonstrators to hold a meeting.

His speech, carried in a one-page newspaper distributed by the demonstrators, called for opposition to the Communists, the present Italian government and "all forms of foreign influence."

The crowds made torches of the newspapers, shouted "Graziani, Graziani, Graziani" and hurled the torches at the police.

The paper also carried an extract from the book, "I Defended My Country," which Graziani wrote while in jail awaiting trial. His trial will begin Monday.

Robert R. Young Built a R. R. Empire With Nerve, Verve and a Shoestring

Anybody can become a railroad magnate . . . well, virtually anybody can. All you need is a lot of nerve, a lot of verve, and a shoestring.

To cite a case in point, let's consider the example of one Robert Ralph Young, chairman of the board of the rolling-in-wealth Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad, whose lush, plush trains of tomorrow are on exhibit Tuesday at Union Station.

Built an empire

Until 11 years ago, Young's only connection with the railroad industry were his initials, R.R., which earned him the nickname of "Railroad" when he was a kid in the Texas Panhandle town of Canadian. But because he was also skinny, small, and possessed of a large head, he was more often called "Pumpkin Head," shortened to "Punk." And though he today controls four railroads (C & O, Nickel Plate, Pere Marquette, Wheeling & Erie), some old time railroad tycoons still consider him a "punk."

For the first 40 years of his life—until 1937, that is—Bob Young was a comparative unknown. Son of a cowpuncher-turned-banker, he hopped around from one school to another, trying to pick up a smattering of education, and trying to shake off a losing streak in shooting craps. At Culver Military Academy, Bob displayed a streak of scholarship, but he quit the University of Virginia at the end of his freshman year, married, and struck out on his own as a powder monkey at a Du-Pont plant.

In 1922, Young tagged onto General Motors as a statistician at $100 a week. Six years later he quit his $35,000-a-year post with GM to serve as financial adviser to the late John J. Raskob. They split when Young predicted, correctly, the market collapse of '29, in which Young cleaned up by selling short.

Young was operating a brokerage on Wall Street and playing around with broken-down securities, when in 1937 he jumped into the Alleghany Corp., a derelict holding company. He pyramided and then was run into the ground by the fabulous Van Sweringen brothers.

With three million dollars put up by a silent partner, and $250,000 of his own money, Young, after a five-year battle with the Wall Street "dambankers," snagged control of the wobbly two-billion-dollar holding company, and its prime beauty, the highly profitable C. & O., which carries coal out of the hills of West Virginia and eastern Kentucky, and converts the carbon into gold.

Today at 51, owning less than .06 per cent of the stock of C. & O., the white-haired, big-browed, 5-foot-6 Texan heads up a railroad empire. Furthermore, having bought 6 per cent of the stock of the New York Central, he is awaiting only the okay of the Interstate Commerce Commission to take over that mighty but shaky road.

While fighting the financiers with one hand, Young has been keeping the other hand busy jabbing away at the American Association of Railroads, the Pullman Co., the boxcar manufacturers, and allied railroad interests which, in the bellicose bantam's opinion, are reactionary so far as streamlined progress is concerned.

Through the newspapers, Young has publicly whipped and stung the railroads into speeding up reforms. "A Hog Can Cross the Country Without Changing Trains — but YOU Can't," Young wrote in his most famous ad, credited with breaking up the Chicago and St. Louis change-overs for transcontental train traffic. He instituted many, and took credit for virtually all, reforms to make railroad travel more pleasant and comfortable.

Young himself loves comfort, be it on a train, on long summer weekends at his mansion in Newport, R. I., or in long winter vacations at his mansion in Palm Beach, Fla., where he frequently entertains the Duke and Duchess of Windsor.

During these weekends and vacations, Young takes solitary walks along the beach, communing with the sea, the more so since his only daughter, Eleanor Jane, was killed in an air crash eight years ago. He reads, writes poetry, and thinks. He dreams some, too, and plans the next step in his ambitious dream to build a coast-to-coast railroad line.

Steam-Turbine Train On View Here Tuesday

The Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad's "Chessie," first steam turbine powered train, will be exhibited at Union Station Tuesday from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m.

The "Chessie" tentatively is scheduled to be shown on track 1. It will pull into Washington sometime this afternoon to start a tour of the entire C. & O. line.

An all-coach, reclining chair passenger train, the "Chessie" with a radio by each seat, a twin unit diner and a tavern car, is a train riders' dream.

Capper Holds U. S. Girds for Eventual War

By the United Press

Senator Arthur Capper (R., Kans.) said yesterday the United States is about ready to abandon officially the "pretension" that peace can be negotiated with Russia.

"Meanwhile," he said, "the United States is moving in several directions to prepare for the eventuality—war."

He said in his weekly broadcast that the official bipartisan foreign policy attitude in Washington "is to make no such acknowledgement, at least not before the elections are over."

But, he said, there are indications that this country is prepared to "give up the fiction" that the United Nations can be an effective force in preserving world peace.

Among these, he listed the "continued and increasing" pressures at Berlin, the adjournment of the U. N. Security Council "in the interest of world peace," and Russia's sit-down strike at the Council meetings.

Marshall Sees Sec. Forrestal

return journey Sunday night but changed the schedule in favor of a Monday takeoff.

His session with Forrestal evidently was arranged late Saturday or early yesterday because at the time of his news conference Marshall said that he did not know what his Sunday plans would be. As is normally true of meetings between Cabinet members and particularly Marshall-Forrestal talks, it was held behind closed doors and secrecy covered the matters discussed.

Persons familiar with Marshall's views and the responsibilities he shares with Forrestal said, however, that his concern over the state of American preparedness in relation to this country's position in world affairs was a fundamental interest which undoubtedly influenced the conference.

Further, it was said that his talk with Forrestal provided the first opportunity in recent weeks for a top level State-Defense review of the preparatory work being done on a military program for western Europe.

Authorities said this is still in such an early stage that there is not yet even a reasonable good guess of the cost of such a program. Marshall, however, presumably would be interested to know what the planners consider this Nation may be able to do and how well American and European military men are cooperating in planning the project.

(In this connection, Senator Arthur Capper (R., Kans.) predicted today that the next Congress may be asked to authorize two billion dollars to rearm Western Europe. In a transcribed broadcast for use in his home State Senator Capper asserted that attempts to negotiate peace between the Wesern nations and Russia are "just about to be officially abandoned."

Conference On Defense Called Here

By the United Press

Defense Secretary James Forrestal announced yesterday he is calling top industry, labor, press, education, church and professional leaders to a 10-day conference on national defense November 8 to 18.

The postelection date was chosen so there would be no political import involved.

Purpose of the conference, defense officials said, is to familiarize leading Americans with the "progress and attainments of the national military establishment. Other groups will be called for similar talks later. The working press will be excluded from all the sessions, Forrestal's announcement said.

Top commanders of the Navy, Air Force and Marines are expected to address the first parley. Leaders of other departments identified closely with the national security planning will be called into the discussions.

The pattern of the conferences is not new. Forrestal frequently called such meetings when he was Secretary of Navy.

The National Munitions Board, under Lieut. Gen. Leroy Lutes, is directing plans for the new discussions. After they are over, the leaders will be invited to attend field demonstrations at Pensacola Naval Air Base, Fla.; Eglin Air Base, Fla., and Fort Benning, Ga.

'Voice' Gives Dewey Edge

candidates, Wallace and Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of the States' Rights Party, don't get as much attention. Officials said all candidates get about the same "relative" coverage that they receive in the Nation's newspapers.

In the analysis, the Voice mentioned Thurmond and Wallace only once by name, describing them as "the lesser candidates."

In connection with Wallace, officials said, the voice has emphasized that he speaks only for a minor party which he himself organized for the purpose of running for President, and that both major political parties support the bipartisan foreign policy.

But the Voice does broadcast Wallace's attacks on American foreign policy, which Wallace has described as war-provoking and "imperialistic."

One Voice official said the spectacle of a Government broadcast carrying an attack on that Government's foreign policy must be electrifying to listeners behind the Iron Curtain. He felt that it would boost the prestige of the Voice as a factual reporter of news.

ernor Dewey's reaction early in the day were told by James C. Hagerty, his press officer, that he had "no comment."

Some of the Dewey lieutenants, however, said privately that they thought Mr. Truman had committed a tremendous blunder that further nailed down a Republican victory in November. They said that it was further proof of what Governor Dewey has been saying on the stump—that Mr. Truman's handling of foreign policy has been "wobbly."

Dewey's first thought was to remain silent. He decided finally that Mr. Truman himself was unable to salvage the damage he had done, and that he, Dewey, would try to do it for him.

The New Yorker looked upon Mr. Truman's plan as a desperate blunder that could have had tragic consequences around the world.

Quite a debate went on between Dewey and his aides as to what he should do. Presumably, some of them urged him to go after Mr. Truman on the stump. His own view was that the matter was far too serious to be made a campaign issue, since any direct attack on Mr. Truman would give comfort to the Kremlin.

In the end, Dewey decided that the important thing was to give reassurance to the British, French and others, and to encourage them to hold together in the cold war with the Soviet Union.

Viewed as Worst Aspect

The worst aspect of Mr. Truman's plan, it was felt here, was the danger that a behind-the-scenes negotiation between Chief Justice Vinson and Premier Stalin would have alarmed the British and French and caused them to doubt the steadfastness of American policy.

Governor Dewey, front runner in the 1948 presidential race, was to leave here at one minute after midnight for a campaign tour of nine States.

Tonight he hailed Senator Vandenberg for his "wise counsel" and "magnificent service" as the Republican Party's chief spokesman in the field of foreign service in recent years.

Dewey's tribute was contained in a letter read at a dinner which Freedom House gave in Vandenberg's honor in New York City.

After telling of his long friendship with Senator Vandenberg and of his admiration for the Michigan statesman's devoted service in the cause of peace, the GOP nominee said:

"As a member of the American delegation at many international conferences, he has worked tirelessly to enshrine our ideals of justice for all peoples in the agreements of governments.

"He was one of the principal architects of the Charter of the United Nations, and his wise counsel was responsible for amendments which have made this document the foundation of the world's hope for peace.

"As chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee for the past two years, he has toiled to make our Nation's bi-partisan foreign policy a strong rock in the masonry of peace with justice. His magnificent service has earned him the gratitude of all his countrymen. I am delighted to join with you in this tribute to a great and good American."

Dewey, in the second phase of his campaign, plans to continue the tactics he followed in the first. His aides say that he will keep his compaign on a "high level" and will ignore President Truman to the fullest extent possible.

His first major speech will come in Pittsburgh, where he will outline "a forward-looking program" for American labor. This will be broadcast over the Columbia Broadcasting System at 8:30 o'clock Monday night.

Two other major speeches will follow, one in Kansas City and the other in St. Paul.

In the course of this tour, the Republican nominee will visit Sapulpa, Okla., the home town of Mrs. Dewey, and also Owosso, Mich. his own birthplace.

Pennsylvania Republicans are prepared to put on a show of unity when Dewey moves into the Keystone State. At Erie, Pa., the victory special will be boarded by two GOP leaders who were at loggerheads over Dewey at the Philadelphia National Convention.

They are United States Senator Edward Martin, who withdrew as a favorite son in Dewey's favor, and Gov. James H. Duff, who fought the New Yorker right up to the time he clinched the nomination.

London Papers Call Vinson Plan 'Blunder,' 'Stunt'

London (Monday), Oct. 11 (AP).—The liberal News Chronicle today called President Truman's discarded plan to send Chief Justice Vinson to Moscow a blunder.

In a front-page story labeled from New York, the paper said Secretary of State Marshall is remaining in Washington an extra day "to clear up the havoc of Truman's unhappy scheme."

The Communist Daily Worker said the "Vinson brain wave was primarily an election stunt" to "disprove a charge that he (Truman) has become nothing but a cipher in the Nation's affairs."

should be able to lift the blockade, establish realistic negotiation on related problems and proceed to a conclusion in civilized fashion."

He said "initial progress" in discussing the Berlin situation with Stalin "subsequently collapsed in a complete Soviet reversal in the Allied council in Berlin."

The Security Council became the only way out, he said, because "further direct discussion became a transparent futility in this tricky, provocative and insidious Soviet runaround."

Vandenberg said he accepted the bronze plaque as a "symbol of the work of many others," adding:

"The important thing to celebrate tonight is the fact that in the last three years as the result of constructive collaboration we have produced to a remarkable extent a united, unpartisan voice for America at the waters' edge."

He offered these axioms as a guide for this country's activities:

"Peace without justice is only an uneasey truce. Another is that the appeasement of aggressors only multiplies the hazards from which we seek escape. Another is that we never voluntarily exchange the council chamber for the battlefield except as an unescapable last resort.

This country has no "overriding aim to contain Russia or to Americanize Europe," he said.

"Our objective is to return Europe to the Europeans and take them off the dole. When this is done, our objective is to retire from a Europe which has reestablished itself."

Sumner Welles, former Undersecretary of State, who made the presentations tonight, praised Vandenberg for his "patient, persistent and constructive assistance" in the operation of the European Recovery Program.

But the Senator's most valuable service to the Nation, Welles said, was in serving notice on other govenments, "and particularly to the government of the Soviet Union, that the United States is not going to be crippled by the subordination of its foreign policy to the exigencies of selfish factionalism."

Messages from President Truman, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and British Prime Minister Attlee were read at the dinner.

Lauding Vandenberg as a "true patriot who has richly earned the Freedom Award," Mr. Truman said he considered the Republican leader a personal friend "and happily that friendship will withstand even the hurlyburly of political campaign."

Dewey said in a message read at the dinner that Vandenberg "has toiled to make our Nation's bipartisan foreign policy a strong rock in the masonry of peace with justice."

Hoffman said "Russia wants no recovery program. She wants . . . confusion and chaos as a basis for the advance of totalitarian dictatorships."

In the six months of ECA's recovery effort, Hoffman said, the 16 Marshall Plan countries have increased their output of coal, steel, electricity, manufactured goods and fertilizer.

"Their crops are better, not only because of good weather, but because of a million tons of fertilizer being produced in Europe this year compared with 750,000 tons prewar.

"The participating nations shortly will have in operation a program for currency. Barriers to the movement of goods, services and people among the nations are gradually being lessened.

Communists Widen French Rail Strikes

Underground Set

USSR Revolt Looms, Says Anti-Stalinist

New York, Oct. 10 (AP).—Constantine W. Boldyreff, self-described leader of a Russian underground movement, said today the Russian people are "ready to revolt" against "the Stalin police state."

Boldyreff

Boldyreff said he heads an 18-year-old underground movement known as "NTS" which has its "main forces" inside Russia. He described its aims at a news conference sponsored by Common Cause, Inc., an inti-Communist organization.

"NTS" stands for Nacionalno Troudovoy Souz—National Alliance of Working, Producing and Creating People.

A Common Cause spokesman said Boldyreff is "well known to American intelligence, is vouched for by high American officials," and cooperated with the American military government in Germany.

Boldyreff said "the first and most important step toward universal human freedom" is "a revolution by the people in Soviet Russia." He predicted a rally of anti-Communist underground groups and sympathizers could create "in a few months" a situation "which would make it impossible for Stalin to attack."

He said "thousands of people" have sacrificed their lives to protect the secrets of NTS. The organization is responsible, he said, for the deaths of about 200 Communists.

Paris, Oct. 10 (AP).—Communists made progress today in their efforts to paralyze French rail communications with a general strike. There was no break in the week-long coal strike.

Rail stoppages occurred in northeast France. The Paris-Luxembourg line was cut at Reims and strikers took over the important station at Colmar. The famous Orient Express and other east-bound international trains had to be rerouted to avoid strike-bound areas.

Communist-led railway unions continued to vote strikes at many other points, but they did not take immediate effect. If the pro-Communists get enough votes at key stations, a general strike may start later in the week.

More than 200,000 miners continued the walkout they began last Monday in the big northern coal basin.

One union delegate in the heart of the northern region declared today:

"If the police so much as show their faces around here we'll stop the pumps and the ventilators. This shaft and three others would be flooded in 24 hours."

Communists Battle Gaullists in Paris

Paris, Oct. 10 (NYHT).—A street battle between 500 Communists and 100 Gaullists broke out today at suburban Puteaux but quick intervention by the police separated the slugging partisans, with no injuries and only one arrest.

The clash was said to have started when vendors of the Gaullist newspaper shouted their wares in the predominantly leftist neighborhood.

In a second street fight, identical circumstances were reported. Gaullist newsboys were said to have found opposition at Ivry, another leftist stronghold. One was injured in the brief brawl there.

Savings, Loans Group Reports Receipts Up

By the United Press

The National Savings and Loan League reported yesterday that, despite the rising cost of living, Americans placed more money in savings and loan associations during the first eight months of this year than in the same 1947 period.

James J. O'Malley, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., league president, said new savings this year totaled $2,657,219,000, compared with $2,309,178,000 last year. He also said that home mortgages recorded in the first eight months of this year reached the "staggering total" of eight billion dollars, some 6 per cent ahead of the same 1947 period.

Guerilla Armies To Be Established In Western Europe

London, Oct. 10 (U.P.).—Formation of guerilla armies designed to wage an underground war with weapons of sabotage in event of enemy occupation is a key part of the plans of the supreme command of the Western European union, reliable sources said today.

Some sources said the plans call for the greatest guerilla force in history.

The nucleus for this resistance force already exists in the five nations that make up the military alliance, France, Britain, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg. It was forged under fire when Nazi Germany occupied the continent.

In Britain now are daring men parachuted into Europe to advise and organize the resistance fighters. Some of these men still are in military service and available for consultation. Others are being asked to undertake various "intelligence" jobs, the sources said.

Big 3 Repeat Berlin Stand To Neutrals

Paris, Oct. 10 (NYHT).—The American, British and French delegates to the United Nations Security Council drafted here today a joint reply to questions put to theim by the six "neutral states" studying the Berlin affair.

The substance of their answer, which was not made public, was that no compromise with the Soviet Union was possible and direct negotiations were out of the question unttil its Russians lifted the blockade of the former German capital.

The questions were submitted to the Western powers by Dr. Juan A. Bramuglia, Argentine foreign minister who is acting as president of the Council during the hearing of the Berlin complaint. He is also doing the talking for the other members of the council who are not involved in the dispute—namely, China, Belgium, Canada, Columbia and Syria.

cagetop trucks to the fortress prison at Acre.

Between 35 and 40 of the prisoners, seized after the September 17 assassination of Count Folke Bernadotte, the U. N. mediator, are still at large after a jailbreak yesterday that had a comic opera touch.

The Sternists had disarmed their Israeli military police guards almost without resistance, roamed the streets at will for 10 hours, shared looted beer with their former captors and bathed in the sea.

By midnight the Israeli army had drawn a net around the jail area. Just before dawn the army issued an ultimatum giving the Sternists five minutes to surrender. They were required to file out of the smashed prison by fives to be searched for arms.

They were loaded in trucks for transport to Acre prison, an ancient jail in northern Palestine.

There was no resistance to the transfer. Virtually all the Sternists had remained in the Jaffa jail voluntarily.

U. S. Soldier Wounded By Gunfire of Koreans

Seoul (Monday), Oct. 11 (AP).—An American soldier was wounded slightly Friday by gunfire from four North Korean constabularymen near the U. S.-Soviet occupation border, the Army reported today.

A bullet grazed the soldier's arm and chest. The Army did not give his name. The announcement said he was shot while performing his normal duties near Paekchon, 50 miles northwest of Seoul.

Russians Feel Pinch of West's Berlin Clamp

Berlin Oct. 10 (AP).—The Russians admitted today the Berlin counter-blockade by the Western powers is beginning to pinch.

They publicly acknowledged economic difficulties in their zone of Germany and blamed them in part upon the squeeze by the Western Allies.

The counter-blockade against eastern Germany was imposed July 26 in reprisal for the Russian closing of land communications between Berlin and the west. The Western power move halted all freight traffic and cut off Russian zone supplies of Ruhr coal and steel and machine products coming from western Germany.

A partial view of the economic squeeze was given in a report of the German Economic Commission for the Soviet zone on industrial production. It covered the third quarter of this year.

This report, published in the Soviet army's official Taegliche Rundschau, spoke of exceptional difficulties and conceded that in several fields production targets were not fulfilled. For lagging steel and metals production, blame was placed on "lack of machinery which formerly came from western Germany."

Steel production was reported running 'far below the target" and efforts are being undertaken to make up the difference with imports of the needed machinery from the Soviet Union, Poland and Czechoslovakia.

The report said electric power exceeded targets "despite lack of repair equipment" and that soft coal production also met its goal.

Chiang Admits His Failures

Nanking, Oct. 10 (AP).—As the Chinese republic austerely observed its thirty-seventh anniversary today, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek soberly acknowledged failure to keep his pledge last spring to drive the Communists north of the Yellow River in six months.

Chiang addressed a closed meeting of his government officials, but the gist of his comment was reported in the pro-Nationalist paper Mei Jih Wan Pao.

The paper said Chiang told his official family he had since discovered "unsuspected weak points" and that "psychological laxity" of the people was responsible for the military failure.

Long War Predicted

Suppression of the Communists "will be a long war," he said, "and Nationalism has come to its final test, whether we succeed or fail."

Latest pro-government war dispatches said the long-quiet Communists in Shensi on the northwest front had driven within 20 miles northeast of Sian, the provincial capital.

(The Communist radio also referred to the Shensi operation as an offensive and said the government's Seventeenth and Thirty-eighth Divisions had been "smashed.")

Fighting on Other Fronts

Reports from the Manchurian front said government troops marching south from Mukden had reached within 25 miles of the Communist-held seaport of Yingkow. They said aerial and naval bombardments were softening Yingkow for an assault.

Inconclusive fighting continued in the Chinhsien area 125 miles southwest of Mukden. Civilian pilots who flew over the sector said the Communists appeared to be using new automatic antiaircraft guns effective up to 15,000 feet.

107 Prominent Petitioners Ask New York To Allow the Magazine Nation in Schools

New York, Oct. 10 (AP).—A group of 107 prominent persons today requested reinstatement of the magazine The Nation in the New York city public schools system.

The petition was made public by Archibald MacLeish, poet and librarian of Congress.

The Nation was banned from the city's public schools several months ago after it published a series of articles critical of the Catholic Church.

Leaders in religion, education, the arts and publishing signed the statement sent to the Federal Commissioner of Education and State Commissioners of Education throughout the country.

Signers included Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt; President Charles Seymour of Yale University; Episcopal Bishop Charles K. Gilbert of New York, and Mark Ethridge, publisher of the Louisville Times and Courier-Journal.

Among points to which the petitioners subscribed were:

"1. No published material which is regarded or could be regarded as objectionable on grounds of faith or creed by any group in the community should on that score alone be excluded from the community's school and school libraries.

"2. Publication of material of this kind in any publication does not justify the suppression in schools and school libraries of the publication as a whole.

"3. The premise that religion cannot be criticized in education should be rejected."

Priest to Give Talk On Kinsey Report

The Kinsey report will be discussed here Tuesday in a talk by the Rev. John P. Sheerin, C. S. P., on "Divine Authority and Polls of Human Conduct."

His talk will headline the first in the fall series of Catholic Panel and Debate Forums to be held at 8:15 p. m. at No. 2 Scott circle. There will be no admission charge.

Washington Wac Among First 69 Entering OCS

A Washington Wac with overseas service in New Guinea and Tokyo behind her, is one of the first 69 officer candidates to go into training at Camp Lee, Va., since the Women's Army Corps became part of the regular Army last June.

Helen Espey

She is Miss Helen E. Espey, 316 Webster st. nw., who first joined the Women's Auxiliary Army Corps in 1943. Graduated in 1938 from McKinley High School here, she attended Benjamin Franklin and George Washington Universities, then worked as an accountant for J. Blaise de Sibour & Co. here.

Separated from the service in May of this year as a master sergeant, Miss Espey reenlisted in the Wac in August and was sent to Camp Lee October 4 for a six-month Officer Candidate School training course.

Colorado Student Falls to Death in Mountain Climb

Boulder, Colo., Oct. 10 (AP).—Robert Pankey, 18-year-old University of Colorado student, fell 750 feet to his death today in a mountain-climbing accident just outside town.

Pankey, from Lakewood, Colo., was climbing a rock structure with a friend and had gone on ahead when his grasp apparently slipped loose from the rock.

His climbing companion, John Hawkins, 17, of Denver, was stranded on a narrow rock ledge 100 feet above the ground for several hours, shaken by the death of his friend.

A group of skilled climbers went up after him and removed him from the ledge.

Cites Agency Aid

In his sermon at Eldbrooke Methodist Church, Wisconsin ave. and River rd. nw., the Rev. F. Paul Harris, pastor, urged the congregation to support the drive in every possible way. He said that the department of social relations of the Washington Federation of Churches is a Red Feather agency which is applying the Christian religion to a modern situation.

This is a crucial year for the Community Chest Federation, the Rev. Robert S. Trenbath, rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, Piney Branch rd. and Dahlia st. nw., said at the morning service.

Individual responsibility for the success of the drive was emphasized by Dr. Alfred W. Hurst, minister of Cleveland Park Congragational Church, 3400 Lowell st. He pointed out that Washington fell short of its goal during the past two years, and appealed to members of the church to spark the drive to make Washington a "pennant contender."

Christian Responsibility

The Christian responsibility to meet the needs of all the community was stressed by the Rev. Earl Franklin Fowler in a Red Feather sermon at Sixth Presbyterian Church, 16th and Kennedy sts. nw. He pointed out that it is what the individual gives, what he does, and how he serves that makes his lasting influence felt.

At many churches, notices in the weekly bulletin called attention to the annual drive and the services rendered by the 104 Red Feather agencies.

Jewish congregations held Red Feather services on Saturday when special messages concerning the drive were read in synagogues and temples.

Truman Starts 6-Day Tour to Overtake Dewey After Setback Due to Peace Trip Incident themselves interested in his "fighting" campaign, feared the incident had offset the "pick-up" noted on his campaign swing through Delaware, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York.

Whatever the effect, Mr. Truman is launching his fourth campaign swing with all of the optimism he began his last three, and with just as rigorous a schedule.

Before he returns to Washington at 4 p. m. Saturday, he will have made five major speeches, starting in Akron, Ohio, Monday night, and delivered 28 other campaign talks at points scattered through Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Minnesota, Wisconsin and West Virginia.

Monday's campaign will be concentrated in now Republican-controlled Ohio. No Senate seats are at stake there, but the President's congressional campaign advisers tell him Democratic prospects of picking up some House seats in the highly industrialized sections were seldom brighter.

This is partly due to an unexpected windfall from Ohio's election ballot box. Back in the '30s, when Franklin Roosevelt's name at the head of a National ballot frequently pulled congressional and local candidates into office with him, Ohio Republicans had a law passed separating the Presidential ballot from the rest.

Operates in Reverse

Today, with Governor Dewey generally pulling more voter weight than State and local candidates, the system operates in reverse for Ohio Republicans. With their names on a separate ballot, Democratic Congressional and local nominees think they have a much better opportunity to win.

Only three Senatorial-contest States will get special attention on this tour—Illinois, West Virginia and Minnesota. In at least two of these, Minnesota and West Virginia, Democrats think they have a better than 50-50 chance of picking up a Senate chair now held by a Republican.

Mr. Truman's brightest Presidential and Senatorial hopes are pinned on Minnesota, which he will stump Wednesday and Thursday. The current Gallup poll shows Truman and Dewey running neck and neck in Minnesota. And local polls show Senator Joseph H. Ball (R.) being pushed to the limit by Mayor Hubert Humphrey of Minneapolis, who has Democratic and Farmer-Labor backing.

Mr. Truman's lone West Virginia speech, in Clarksburg Saturday morning, is a return engagement. Former Senator Matthew M. Neely thinks he has Senator Chapman Revercomb (R., W. Va.) on the ropes and Mr. Truman wants to put in another punch for Neely.

For Mr. Truman, it will be an encore appearance in Illinois too. There Senator Wayland C. (Curly) Brooks, of the Chicago Tribune wing of the Republican Party is challenged by the liberal Democratic nominee, Paul Douglas. Mr. Truman will make a major speech in Springfield, Ill., Tuesday night.

Other major speeches on this trip include St. Paul, Minn., Wednesday night, Milwaukee, Wis., Thursday night, and Indianapolis, Ind., Friday night.

UMW Officials Predict Cool Truman Reception

Cincinnati, Oct. 10 (U.P.).—Union officials tonight predicted that the bulk of the delegates to the United Mine Workers' fortieth convention will give President Truman "a cool reception" on his brief visit here Monday.

The convention, due to wind up Tuesday, has urged by an overwhelming vote that Mr. Truman be defeated in November. It has indirectly backed Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, Republican candidate for President. UMW President John L. Lewis called Mr. Truman an "enemy" of the union and "dangerous to the United States." He has refused to comment on the President's Cincinnati visit.

Krum Asserts Va. in Revolt

Tyrrell Krum, Republican nominee for Congress in Virginia's Eighth District, yesterday expressed amazement at "the depth of the revolt which is going on among the people of Virginia against the present national administration."

Krum said the "rank and file of voters are intensely alarmed about the prospects of another war." He added they "place full responsibility for our present domestic confusion and international insecurity squarely upon Harry Truman and his White House crowd. They have made up their minds it's time for a change now."

Krum spoke at the opening of his campaign headquarters in Falls Church. A 48-year-old veteran of both wars, Krum said he had spent two months campaigning, and had visited "every nook and corner of northern and central Virginia, from the tidewaters of the Potomac to the tip of the Blue Ridge."

Churchill Runs U. S. Policy, Says Wallace

Minneapolis, Oct. 10 (AP).—Henry Wallace said tonight Winston Churchill "by bluff and bluster" took over American foreign policy in 1946—and this policy now is based on "hatred of Russia."

Wallace, moving eastward from the Pacific Coast in his flying campaign for presidential votes, denounced Churchill and Harry S. Truman—a "timid, uncertain man"—in a speech here tonight. He said President Truman had let himself be "overawed" by the British leader.

He also said America's policy-makers, if they go "unchecked" in their "insane course," will soon have "a fully armed Germany." And he said, "there is absolutely no threat to our security at the present time."

Flying here from Spokane, Wash., Wallace paused in Great Falls, Mont., and told a group of his Progressive Party supporters at the airport that the last week "has been characterized by an extraordinary drive to make the American people ready for war."

He stopped at Moorhead, Minn., for a farm speech. He said President Truman and Governor Dewey are playing a game of "who stuck the pitchfork in the farmer's back?" He added they are both guilty.

Wallace said Churchill, though a "great battler" in wartime, is "the most skillful and vicious scuttler of the century of the common man in time of peace."

"An imperialist, he is working hand-in-glove with Henry Luce of Time, Life and Fortune for a London-Rome-Madrid-Wall Street axis," Wallace added.

"I saw Churchill by bluff and bluster take over our foreign policy in 1946," he said. Wallace said that President Roosevelt had never let himself be over-awed by Churchill, but "Truman did."

Wallace added, "We are snuggling up to Francisco Franco of Spain, preparing the way for one of the most revolting and scandalous alliances in history."

Shrunk Heads Give Doctor Cure Idea

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

An Ecuadorian physician with an enterprising head on his shoulders and eight shrunken ones in his pitch bag was in Washington this weekend on a one-man medical mission.

His object, he said, is to seek funds and professional support to set up a modern teaching hospital in Quito, Ecuador, and make of it a Latin-American training center for the fight against diseases.

A colorful campaigner, Dr. Wilburn H. Ferguson, United States-born anesthesiologist, set up first shop here in the reception salon of the home of the Ambassador from Ecuador. He filled two card tables with his herbs, barks and curios.

Standing out like morning-after miseries were the eight human heads, shrunk by junglemen to baseball size, and a small bottle of dark fluid.

Sample of Shrinking Brew

The liquid, of untested composition, is a sample of the brew used by head-hunting natives of the Amazon basin to shrink their victims' heads into trophy belt marriage tokens, said Dr. Ferguson. He said he got a liter of the stuff from a friendly Brujo (brooho), or priest-doctor, of one of the jungle tribes.

"As far as I know," said Dr. Ferguson, "I am the first and only white man ever to lay my hands on this stuff."

He amended this later to say he never had laid his hands on it. "It's probably deadly poisonous," he said.

Dr. Ferguson, with carefully worded speculation that the brew might have cancer cure possibilities, said he would turn it over to chemical analysts to determine its composition. The heads, almost identical to a similar collection he has already given the Museum of the Royal College of Surgeons, Edinburgh, Scotland, will be presented to an American institution, "probably Columbia University," he said.

Just when these things will be done has not been decided as yet. In the meantime, he's willing to go "anywhere, anytime" to further his goal, rejuvenation of the 400-year-old San Juan de Dios Hospital, of Quito, he said.

Less gruesome but still interest-provoking among Dr. Ferguson's stock were other attractions. They included such things as seashell brassieres, bark cloth adorned with bird feathers, a vial of "winged death" curare, and a six-foot blowgun and darts used by the junglemen to hunt and kill.

The bark cloth would have made an attractive skirt for a mild-mannered masquerade party. The half-dollar small seashells strung together by a fiber cord and suspended from the neck wouldn't mask or support anything.

Medicinal herbs and barks, used for cures for almost anything ranging from an aching tooth to menstrual disorders, were packaged in cellophane. They were passed around so everyone could see medicine and poison in their natural habitats.

And as he passed them out for inspection, Dr. Ferguson spoke glowingly of the possibilities of developing new specific drugs from jungle-used potions. He pointed out that quinine bark was chewed against malarial ravages for centuries in Ecuador before it was introduced to the medical world.

Explains His 'Idea'

Someone interrupted to ask him to expand on his speculation that the head-shrinking brew might hold a key to cancer's cure.

"It's strictly speculation," said Dr. Ferguson, "but it's an idea I've had for a long time. You see, pathologists say it's impossible to shrink cartilaginous tissue, but head-hunters have been doing it for centuries.

"This brew apparently holds the answer to such shrinking. Now everyone knows cancer is unrestrained growth of tissue cells. If this fluid can shrink cartilage, perhaps it can also hold back cancer growth. It's only an idea, really."

Contrary to the belief of many, the shrunken head is strictly exterior skin, hair and gristle. All bony structure is thrown away after the head is slit up from the back of the neck and "peeled off like a sock," said the Washington visitor. It falls back into its natural, but miniature, shape after the boiling process, he explained.

1 Penicillin Shot Seen VD Cure

A single injection of pencillin may be sufficient to cure "the large majority" of cases of early syphilis.

This was pointed out yesterday by the Health Department in one of a series of statements in connection with its current drive against venereal disease.

The department released a history of penicillin which showed that since its accidental discovery it has been successfully used to kill bacteria which cause pneumonia, childbed fever, erysipelas, severe heart disease, boils, blood poisoning, gonorrhea, infant blindness and meninigitis, and many other ailments.

Widespread use of penicillin was not possible until World War II, when through a mass effort by Government and industry, it was produced in large quantities. Dr. M. J. Romansky, now of the George Washington University School of Medicine, removed the other obstacle to mass use when he developed a suspension method for the drug, to prevent its quick absorption into the bloodstream. This step alone cut the number of injections of penicillin necessary to one eighth to one twelfth of what they formerly had been.

Penicillin for syphilis was first tried in 1943 in the venereal disease research center of the United States Public Health Service at the Marine Hospital on Staten Island. A total of 100 cases of early syphilis, when treated with penicillin, showed apparent cure in 90 per cent of the cases.

Seabee Veterans Elect President Accused by Navy

Chicago, Oct. 10 (AP).—The Seabee Veterans of America today elected Capt. Howard P. Potter, veteran Naval Reserve construction officer, their first president.

Potter, 50, who formerly lived in Jacksonville, Ill., was until recently in charge of the Reserve Seabee program in the Ninth Naval District. He is now assigned to Washington, D. C.

The new veterans' organization president was tried in August by a Navy court-martial on charges that he was illegally employed by the Illinois State Housing Board while on active Navy duty.

Twenty-two of 27 specifications were held "not proved" by the court. Findings on 5 other specifications are under review by higher naval authorities.

Potter has a distinguished record of service in two World Wars.

3 Rodeo Performers, 2 Women Die in Crash

Thermopolis, Wyo., Oct. 10 (AP).—Three well known rodeo performers and two women were killed when their automobile careened off a highway today.

The dead included Tom Knight, 30; George Knight, 23, and Arlie (Mickey) McCrorey, 36, all rodeo stars. The Knights were brothers of Nick Knight, former world champion cowboy. Also killed were Mrs. Tom Knight, 25, and Grace Mayer, 17. All lived in Wyoming.

Blind Veteran Of D. C. Pleads For Civilians

Hartford, Conn., Oct. 10 (AP).—The Blinded Veterans' Association wants the Government to give more aid to all blind persons, it was reported here today during the final session of the three-day Eastern Conference of Home Teachers of the Adult Blind.

The association, of which 800 of the Nation's 1500 blinded veterans are members, is in sympathy with sightless persons who get few benefits from the Government, declared Lloyd Greenwood of Washington, D. C., executive secretary of the association.

He told the more than 150 conference delegates from 15 States that his group intends to "take up the fight" for all blind persons in the near future.

Greenwood, who lost his sight while on a flying mission over the Romanian oil fields during World WarII, described the contrast between what is done for the soldier-blind and the civilian-blind.

Hardy Leads U. S. Force In Marianas, Bonins

Tokyo, Oct. 10 (U.P.).—Gen. Rosswell S. Hardy has assumed command of all United States troops in the Marianas-Bonins Islands group, it was announced here today by Maj. Gen. Paul J. Mueller, chief of staff for the Far East Command.

Hardy was chief of the plans, training and personnel division in Washington.

Supreme Court To Announce Cases Today

By the United Press

The Supreme Court is due to act today on cases ranging from the Varga girls to Reno divorces.

The justices will announce which of the appeals from lower courts decisions filed during the long summer vacation will be granted reviews. No formal written decisions are expected.

Once more the court is being asked to uphold the evangelistic activities of Jehovah's Witnesses sect. Members of the sect have asked the court to protect their right to seek new converts in door to door calls in a 35,000-tenant apartment development in New York.

In another case Harold Hirshberg, former naval petty officer convicted of brutality to fellow prisoners of war in Japanese camps, wants the tribunal to set aside his military sentence.

Former Wac Capt. Kathleen B. Durant is asking the court to free her from a five-year military sentence for theft of $1,500,000 of the Hesse crown jewels.

Several employers have asked the court to rule they do not need to guarantee full prewar job rights to World War II veterans.

Alberto Vargas, the Peruvian artist, wants the court to help him break a 10-year contract that binds him to draw the curvaceous Varga damsels for Esquire magazine for $50,000 a year.

Two women want the court to decide which is a legal widow. One was the first wife, and the other was married to the same man after a Reno divorce. Connecticut courts ruled the "quickie" divorce was invalid.

The Federal Government has urged the bench to reconsider a decision of last June authorizing a premium overtime pay formula for longshoremen. Critics of the decision claim it awards "overtime on overtime."

Four railway unions are asking that a lower court injunction against a strike scheduled last spring be declared illegal. The injunction was issued under the 80-day "emergency" section of the Taft-Hartley law.

Two big Michigan criminal cases have been appealed. Floyd Fitzsimmons, Benton Harbor lobbyist, seeks review of his conviction for attempting to rob a member of the Michigan State Legislature.

Frank Lobaido, a Detroit grocer, seeks review of his conviction for the rape-murder of a 7-year-old girl.

Fittings Worth Million toMark Home Show

A homemakers wonderland will be on view starting Saturday when the annual National Capital Home Show Exposition opens at the National Guard Armory, 2001 East Capitol st.

The latest in electrical devices, furniture, plumbing, weatherproofing and kitchen planning will be included in the 150 exhibits, which will include equipment worth more than a million dollars. The show will be open from 10 a. m. till midnight through October 24.

Entries in the Home Show Queen contest yesterday neared the hundred mark, as Greater Washington women put in their bids for the $3500 aluminum vacation cottage which will reward the winner.

The queen contest, open to either married or single women, closes October 22. Semifinalists will be chosen from photographs and accompanying descriptive letters. Finalists will be picked daily at the armory by popular applause, and the queen herself will be selected on the final night of the show.

Red Cross Increasing Staffs With Military

The American Red Cross announced yesterday that it is increasing its staffs at military establishments to keep pace with expansion of the armed forces.

President Basil O'Connor estimated the organization would need 300 more paid employes by nextt July 1 to provide adequate services to the 2,166,882 men expected to be in uniform on that date.

Boy Scout Training Seen Need of Russians

Harpenden, England, Oct. 10 (AP).—The trouble with the world, Lord Hampden said in an address here today, is that Josef Stalin never was a Boy Scout.

"The gentlemen who live in the Kremlin have not been brought up as Boy Scouts," he observed at a Scout conference. "If they had, we might have a chance of coming to an agreement."

TWA Constellations, in transcontinental service alone, completed 97% of all scheduled mileage in the period December through March, 1948—an all-time record during one of the toughest winters in history!
3 to 1 FAVORITE for transatlantic flight!
In the first half of 1948, of the thousands of passengers who flew the Atlantic, more than 3 out of 4 flew in fast, comfortable Constellations! And Constellations are carrying even larger numbers in the second half of this year!
Records tell why thousands prefer world-proved TWA Skyliners!
On this page are facts and figures about TWA Constellations. These are actual accomplishments . . . not theories! No 300-m.p.h. airliner in service today has been as thoroughly proved under all operating conditions.
So next time you fly, treat yourself to the finest in air travel. Take a TWA Constellation for unsurpassed speed and comfort as well as world-proved dependability. These great TWA Skyliners fly high above the weather . . . carry hundreds of gallons of extra gasoline . . . have the added advantage of a Flight Engineer. He supervises engine operation, watches hundreds of instruments and controls, thus taking this load off the pilots' shoulders. Courteous service. Delicious food served in flight at mealtime with TWA's compliments.

Strange Fruit

The Taft-Hartley Act has been in effect for some 15½ months now, since June 23, 1947, and may figure to some extent in the coming election. Many campaign speeches, of course, are giving it high priority. But whether many votes will be determined by the voters' attitude toward the law is not so certain. Rank and file union members, by all accounts, are still not very well informed about the exact content of the law and not nearly so up in arms about it as union leaders. A survey recently conducted by the magazine Factory Management and Maintenance seems to show a general acceptance of and even satisfaction with the act among factory workers. In any event, 7 out of 10 of those workers sampled in the poll said they thought themselves as well off or better off under Taft-Hartley than before it was passed. The result suggests that neither the denunciations nor the praises of the law that fill the air have influenced the ordinary worker or will determine his vote.

But if the recent election results in Maine can be taken as indicative of a possible future trend, the Taft-Hartley law may have at least one effect favorable to organized labor. While Maine was going overwhelmingly Republican its voters also rejected two proposals tending to restrict union activity. One of these would have prohibited the closed shop and the other all forms of union security clauses, secondary boycotts, sympathetic strikes and the like.

Just because Maine went in this particular direction does not mean that other States will. But there is some other evidence—much less clear to be sure—that the pendulum has reached the end of its swing. While only 11 State Legislatures met during the last year, few proposals for restrictive labor legislation appeared and none was passed. Some of those States already had laws of considerable breadth and others which might have strengthened theirs perhaps did not do so because 1948 is an election year. But whatever the reason the record for State labor legislation last year stands in marked contrast to that of 1947 when 30 States enacted such laws. The year just before the Taft-Hartley Act went into effect was in fact the high point of the trend to counter the Wagner Act through State laws.

Without making any predictions as to what State lawmakers will do in the coming legislative season there is at least ground for hope that the turning point in State labor legislation has been reached and passed because people feel the Taft-Hartley Act will adequately correct abuses about which they were concerned. And in view of the tendency of State laws to be a good deal tougher on unions than Federal legislation the unions may be reaping an unrecognized benefit from the law their leaders so hotly decry.

Braves' New World

Until yesterday afternoon the 1948 World Series was so sorely lacking in excitements and assorted uncertainties that, were it not for Mr. Truman and Mr. Churchill, the French Communists, the George Washington University football team and some other diversions, the general tedium of life might have been too much for many of us. But whether it was because of the fine weather or for some other reason the Boston Braves suddenly recovered from the sleeping sickness, or whatever it was that had been afflicting them, since their arrival in Cleveland, and began behaving like a championship ball club. All in all, they provided for as many of their partisans as had not already abandoned them to fate a delirious seven innings in which they took a wide lead over the Indians, lost it, won it back again and finally smothered the unhappy Mr. Feller, and so kept themselves in the series for at least another day.

There were several ironies about this performance. One of them was that the Braves won by the technique for which the American rather than the National League has been celebrated, that is, by a concentration of power in a single "big inning" that put the game irrevocably in the bag. This was probably quite fortuitous; but for a while in the seventh inning they must have seemed to many of the vast crowd in the Cleveland stadium like so many reincarnations of the New York Yankees of the late 1920s or the early 1930s. Another irony is that if the Braves had been able to distribute all the base hits they made yesterday over all the five games thus far played they would now be the world's champions.

It is not, of course, impossible that they may emerge world champions anyway. But the chances seem even more strongly against it than they were when the series began. The Braves have pretty well exhausted their pitching resources after Mr. Spahn's brilliant performance in rescuing the last five innings of yesterday's game; but we must see what we shall see.

Mr. Churchill's Warning

Since his retirement from office Mr. Churchill has served as a kind of warning voice of freedom. He spoke out in that role again on Saturday night. While he urged patience "to the utmost limits which our safety allows," he thinks that "we should not delude ourselves with the vain expectation of a change of heart in the ruling forces of Communist Russia." The ugly truth is that the 14 men in the Kremlin fear the friendship of the free world because of the threat freedom always offers to their power. Any settlement with the Soviet Union, therefore, is likely to be limited and ephemeral, and when the Russians succeed in developing the atomic bomb Mr. Churchill visualizes horrors too awful to describe.

His warning is twofold: First, he urges protection of the American monopoly in the making of atomic bombs as long as possible. "If the United States were to consent, in reliance upon any paper agreement, to destroy the stocks of atomic bombs which they have accumulated," he declared, "they would be guilty of murdering human freedom and committing suicide themselves." On this point he need have little fear. The Americans who would favor destruction of our atomic bombs, without complete internationalization of atomic energy under a foolproof system affording inspection, control and immediate action against all violators, are fewer than the followers of Henry Wallace. The hope of getting an agreement of this kind from the Russians is virtually nil, as Secretary Marshall admitted on his return from Paris; and that necessarily means that our atomic industry will continue to develop and make more devastating weapons as our best hope of attaining security in the present divided world.

Mr. Churchill's second warning seems to overdo the emphasis on force, as he did in his speech at Fulton, Mo., more than two years ago. "The Western nations will be far more likely to reach a lasting settlement without bloodshed," he said, "if they formulate their just demands while they have the atomic power and before the Russian Communists have got it, too." What should these just demands be? Not merely the lifting of the blockade in Berlin. As Mr. Churchill put it, that would be only "the stopping of blackmail." His suggestion that "we ought to bring matters to a head and make a final settlement" is coupled with a challenge to the Russians to release their grip on the satellite states, liberate the million German and Japanese prisoners they hold as slaves, cease their exploitation of the Russian-occupied areas of Germany and Austria, free the Communist-dominated portion of Korea, stop the civil war in China and open Russia to free travel. But it is scarcely to be supposed that he would try to exact all these sweeping concessions from the Russians as the price of an otherwise satisfactory agreement on atomic weapons.

Regardless of what "final settlement" Mr. Churchill may have in mind, we think he has overemphasized the bargaining value of the atomic bomb in the hands of democratic governments. The strength of our position in world opinion would quickly vanish if we tried to force any set of demands upon another power under threat of atomic war. The bomb is a bulwark of freedom where freedom already exists and a great deterrent to any fresh act of totalitarian aggression. But the consequences of atomic warfare are too frightful to justify using it as a threat to bring about the kind of peace settlement the Western nations seek. The attitude of those powers today is much like that of Lincoln when he became President in 1860, still hopeful that civil war might be avoided. "You can have no conflict," he said to the rebellious States in his inaugural address, "without being yourselves the aggressors." It is of the utmost importance for the democratic powers to adhere to that position, for their strength lies as much in being right before the world as in the atomic bomb.

Italy's Fleet

There seems little room for doubt that renewed Russian pressure to get a share of the Italian navy is an outgrowth of the overall East-West tension. If there is going to be a shooting war, or short of that a reinforcement in the balance of potential armed strength, the Kremlin wants the Italian vessels allotted it under the peace treaty and wants them at once. Under the circumstances, there is nothing the United States can do to back up the Italians. In a showdown we should have to insist that they abide by the treaty terms.

It will be recalled that at the time of the Italian surrender the Soviet Union demanded immediate possession of one third of Italy's fleet. Since the strategic situation in the Mediterranean made that impossible, the United States and Britain turned over 12 of their own naval vessels in lieu of Italian ships. The Russians agreed to return them on receipt of its share of the Italian fleet and thus still holds them.

The treaty with Italy named those ships of the Italian navy which were to be put at the disposal of the four principal victors and transferred within three months of ratification of the treaty. An added protocol set up a four-power naval commission in Rome to divide up the booty. But before the three-month period was up the United States and Great Britain renounced their shares and France scaled down its take. The Soviet Union did not do so; but neither did it press Italy to come across, probably because of the then approaching elections.

Countering the Russian post-election demands, culminating in Molotov's call for immediate delivery, the Italians have now referred the issue to the four-power naval commission. And here the United States can only take the position that Italy should abide by the treaty terms. A suggestion that the treaty be revised would be futile, of course. But the Italian government can if it wishes, and it certainly does, continue to delay the transfer of any ships to Russia. It runs no risk of sanctions applied either by the four powers or by Russia single-handedly for not acting to carry out the transfer.

On the contrary, it would suffer immense loss of support internally if it did let any ships go to Russia. And the attack of domestic parties would be unanimous, including the Communists. For this is another of the not-infrequent instances since the war where Soviet policies run directly counter to the nationalist sentiments of local Communists. Italian Communists, along with all other Italians, will have to back the government in holding the navy together as a symbol of national prestige. Which means that the United States, Britain and France can probably let the situation take care of itself. We may never see the old cruiser Milwaukee again, nor the British the 11 vessels they supplied. But the trade for 33 Italian ships retained in the Mediterranean may not be too disadvantageous in the long run.

The Right To Know

What the Baltimore Bar Association proposes as a "modification" of the gag rule on reporting of crime news in that city turns out, on analysis, to be exactly the opposite. The Baltimore lawyers have recommended, to be sure, a liberalization of two parts of the edict of the Baltimore supreme bench. These changes would permit the reporting of the conduct of the accused while in custody and would remove the all-inclusive and confusing phrase that prohibits the "publication or broadcast of any matter which may prevent a fair trial." But in return the association suggests another rule extending even to preliminary hearings the prohibition against mention of a confession or the past record of the accused. Moreover, the bar association follows the recommendation of a committee of Circuit Court judges in gratuitously calling for the expansion of this type of suppression to cover the entire State of Maryland.

The futility of the Baltimore court rule was demonstrated, we think, during the recent Brill murder case. Before the trial, Baltimore newspapers were under compulsion not to say anything more than that a suspect had been arrested, and, indeed, five radio stations were cited for contempt because of alleged infractions. Yet Washington newspapers giving details of the accused man's confession and criminal record circulated freely in Baltimore, and to our knowledge authorities there found no way to turn back radio beams from the outside.

Two factors are at stake: The accused's right to a fair trial and the public's right to know the facts. But these rights are more complementary than conflicting. The integrity of the judicial system depends, in the last analysis, upon a public check on court operations. With respect to criminal cases, there is more involved than merely the interest of the accused. There is also society's interest in knowing whether the police are doing a good job and whether a confessed criminal has been apprehended. Frequently the free reporting of crime news can bring new clews in a crime or can contribute to the defense of persons wrongfully accused.

This is not to say that the press itself does not have some social responsibility for the way it reports crime news. Unwarranted sensationalism is a cause of concern to many conscientious newspapermen. But the courts are are not powerless against trial by newspaper. They have the indisputable authority—and the bar association recognizes this authority—to cite for contempt when the conduct of the press presents a clear and present danger to the administration of justice. The Baltimore court has broadened this power, however, in an attempt to insulate jurors from all knowledge except that gained in the courtroom. These efforts are doomed to failure, if for no other reason than that jurors are human beings living in an age of modern communications. One of the prime duties of a judge is to instruct jurors that they must be guided only by the evidence presented in court.

Freedom of the press is not a self-serving phrase invented by the press for its own sake. The press is merely the custodian of a right that belongs to society, just as do all other freedoms guaranteed in the Constitution. That is why a veil of secrecy over one freedom, or the overemphasis of one right at the expense of others, ultimately puts all freedoms in jeopardy.

INDIFFERENCE

By night the long grass blew
And where, above the height, the stars were few,
We did not mark
The gathering cloud; the dark beyond the dark,
Seeing no worlds beyond the world we knew.

By day the poppies flared,
And in the fields the grass was golden-haired;
We did not mark, or see
Which bird it was that sang exultantly,
Sensing no bliss beyond the bliss we shared.

Now time nor tide perceives
The light low mound beneath the fallow leaves
Wherein you sleep;
The evening fields no least remembrance keep,
Nor is the rose made mindful in the eaves.

Such is the way with all!
Unseen the apple blossoms by the wall,
And ere we yet behold
The reddening fruitage touched with sunset gold,
Night comes, and we ourselves are past recall.

Arming Europe

In Walter Lippmann's column of October 7, "The Dilemma of European Defense," he states that "the defense of western Europe is a vital interest of the United States". That would be true were a war imminent. But his method of solution is anything but conducive to a deferred peace.

As a matter of convincing the Kremlin that it would be foolhardy on its part to engage in hostilities, Mr. Lippmann suggests convincing the Red army strategists "that it would be exceedingly dangerous to invade western Europe and second, that the arming of western Europe is in fact defensive."

Past history has shown that building up a strong defensive does not instill the feeling for peace. The race for armaments before World War I was one of the reasons for the final outbreak of that conflagration. Does Mr. Lippmann think that arming western Europe will ward off a clash?

On the other hand it would seem that the arming of western Europe will have its repercussions in Russia. If you have had a few fist fights with a neighbor, and during the weekend you find out he's getting in shape to disfigure the features of your treasured physiognomy, you will either run to the attic and get out grandpa's brass knuckles or cultivate a group of friends who will stick close to you. Russia will take steps to be prepared for the growing armed strength of her neighbors.

Her most obvious way of counteracting the threat to her security would be a plan paralleling Mr. Lippmann's suggestions, mainly of arming her own satellites.

1920 And 1948

During the campaign in 1919 the Republicans built up the myth that the Wilson Administration was to blame for everything that the people grumbled about, and to cure all the evils of the country it was necessary only to throw out the Democrats and put the Republicans in office.

They did that and what was the result?

The Republicans also claimed the cost of living would be reduced automatically; that the farmer would get more for his crops, but the consumer would pay less. If they had had a dozen Houdinis their statement would still have been ridiculous.

They never defined "Wilsonism," but according to their notion, it spelt everything that was objectionable, from the high cost of living to poor gasoline. Today it's "New Dealism" they shout about, but ask them what that is and none of them can define it!

The day after election in 1920 the New York World said, "The American people thought they wanted a change in the administration and they have voted for a change. They did not know what kind of a change they wanted and they do not know today what kind of a change they have voted for. All the restlessness and discontent bred of the war has found expression in the ballot box and the result is Warren G. Harding. What is certain is that the country has returned to reaction in the naive belief that Republican policies can cure all the economic evils that were produced by the war."

World Citizenship

Garry Davis embodies the concept of one world welded together not by war but by peace—man's natural nature. The examples he has set thus far reflect the ambitions of the masses.

If his declaration of world citizenship is ignored or neglected by the United Nations this organization in turn will be neglected and ignored by the masses who have realized that the United Nations is not the instrument through which one world peace as a dominant factor will become a reality.

Rather they would believe that if the United Nations failed to protect the rights of one who has given up all to embrace the blessings which the United Nations advocates, it would fail to protect the rights of all individuals and thereby defeat the very purpose for which it was created.

Then the intelligent man would realize that his hope of one world and peace everlasting could evolve only through world war with one power conquering, dominating and forcing its convictions and uniformity of principles upon what was left, assuming that something was left.

Parochial Schools

Mr. Holton R. Small (letter published October 5) appears considerably alarmed at the "diversion of public school funds to private use" when he challenges the right of legislative bodies to allot funds for private-school bus service. It is apparent that many people who are indifferent to the cooperation of church and state when it concerns practically any phase of American life become indignant at the mention of state aid to private schools. Why?

If Catholic schools were not giving an education equal in value to that given by the public schools, they would long since have been closed by the civil authorities. But they haven't been, and hence they are recognized as acceptable units in our American system of public education. And yet we read of school buses, supported by taxes paid by Catholics as well as Protestants, passing up children because they are Catholics fulfilling their duty to the law by acquiring an education—but in a school that satisfies their conscience.

The whole debate resolves itself into this dilemma. Either the parochial schools perform the same function as the public schools in training children for American citizenship, or they do not. If they do, they are worthy of public support in return for the contribution they make to the state; if they do not perform the same function, then they should immediately be deprived of approval under state compulsory education laws.

Lincoln Cabin Hoax

On September 19 The Washington Post published a United Press dispatch from Springfield, Ill., in which it is stated that "the log cabin now enshrined at Hodgenville, Ky., as the birthplace of Abraham Lincoln is a hoax." Roy Hays of Grosse Point, Mich., makes the charge.

The only evidence Mr. Hays produces is a letter from Robert Lincoln, written in 1919, who stated that "the structure now enshrined in a great marble building in Kentucky is a fraud when represented as the actual home" in which his father was born. There is contemporary evidence, however, bearing on this matter, which is weightier, sustaining Mr. Hays' thesis.

In the year 1865, after Lincoln's assassination, a number of newspaper correspondents were sent into Kentucky, Illinois, Indiana and elsewhere to gather up biographical data and other incidents in the life of the late President. Two of these journalists recorded incidents of their visit to Hodgenville. From one of them I quote the following:

"My leading desire to visit Kentucky was to see our lamented President Lincoln's birthplace . . . I directed my course to the little village of Hodgenville, in Larue County. Two miles south of this place Abraham Lincoln's father took up a claim of 300 acres of land, where he built a pioneer cabin, and where the unsuspected embryo President was born. Unable to pay for this land, the claim was relinquished, and, while little Abe was only a few years old, the family was moved from the place.

"The spot was shown me where the cabin once stood. I afterward received an accurate description of it from an old man named John Morris. Having occasion to call at the house for a drink of water, and being struck with the remarkable neatness of the place, he inquired who lived there, and learned that it was one Lincoln . . . His attention was attracted by the unusual features in log-cabin architecture of one or two sheds and a kitchen attached to the house.

"There are now no vestiges of the Lincoln cabin remaining; blackberry vines and a Chickasaw plum tree divide possession of the site. The latter is the descendant of one planted there more than half a century ago . . ." (Philadelphia Press, September 1, 1865.)

A correspondent of the Louisville Democrat wrote a more detailed description of the disappearance of the log cabin. He said that it was torn down and the logs carried to Hodgenville and incorporated into a stable, which was later demolished and the logs cut up for firewood.

The description of the cabin, as given by Mr. Morris to the Philadelphia reporter, shows that it was not an inclosed house, but a lean-to, one side being open, similar to the cabin Thomas Lincoln built in Indiana and in which Nancy Hanks died, and to which he brought Sarah Bush, his second wife. If this is not incorrect, then the log cabin in the marble shrine in Kentucky does not conform at all to the one John Morris visited and described.

When I was a very young reporter the State of Tennessee held an exposition to celebrate its century of Statehood. Among the exhibits on the midway was a log cabin brought there by a faker and advertised as the "original cabin in which Lincoln was born." Being skeptical about that, and being stationed on the exposition grounds to cover daily events, I asked the owner of this cabin how he knew that Lincoln was born in that very cabin. His reply was about like this, according to my recollection: "Lincoln was born in a log cabin, weren't he? Well, one cabin is as good as another." That identical fake was later sold to the people who erected the marble shrine over it at Hodgenville.

Matter Of Fact

New New Dealers

CHICAGO.—When the Republicans were beaten in 1932, it was six years before the dead stump of the party began putting out such vigorous new shoots as Thomas E. Dewey, Harold Stassen and Henry Cabot Lodge, jr. It was 16 years before the new growth pretty well covered the party's Harding-Coolidge-Hoover era deadwood. And it is precisely this obliteration of the old-style Republicanism that now virtually assures Dewey's election to the Presidency.

If the situation here in Illinois is any test, the Democrats will not have so long to wait for their comeback. Even now, in their moment of disaster, they have found new men with new ideas, Adlai Stevenson and Paul Douglas, to nominate for the governorship and senatorship. Stevenson and Douglas may well be beaten. Yet they constitute a startling contrast, nonetheless, to the tired, old party hacks the Republicans kept on trotting out for so long after the Hoover debacle in 1932.

It is further interesting to note that, while Paul Douglas' work in Illinois established his claim to the senatorial nomination, the selection of Stevenson for the governorship was suggested from Washington by the most eminent of the surviving New Dealers. Ed Kelly, the retired satrap of the Cook County Democratic machine, has long admired Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas. And it can now be disclosed that Justice Douglas proposed the nomination of Stevenson, whom he had come to know and like during Stevenson's service in Washington.

ALL THIS is a pretty far cry from the behavior of the great Democratic city machines in the past. Even as recently as 1944, Ed Kelly himself was one of the Northern bosses who blocked his friend, Justice Douglas, for the Vice Presidency, and forced the choice of Harry S. Truman because he was politically regular. If you talk to Jake Arvey, Kelly's successor as Cook County leader, the apparent anomaly is rapidly explained. Arvey is no political goo-goo, but he is an intelligent, energetic and capable organization man. And he is trying to rebuild the old Cook County machine, from foundation upward, on an entirely new pattern.

In the old pattern, before the 1930's, the great urban Democratic machine voted their masses of untutored immigrants like sheep, securing their loyalty by little favors, Christmas baskets and the like. Then during the 1930's and early 1940's, Franklin Delano Roosevelt served as the "best precinct captain" of the urban organization, as Arvey puts it.

Now, however, the city machines have to deal with a much better educated, more independent second generation in all the great racial communities of their cities. And this second generation has moreover been taught by Roosevelt to expect all sorts of service and assistance from the Government.

In other words, the city machines have got to offer good, progressive government in order to retain their hold on the urban voting masses. In Chicago, Arvey and his lieutenants bowed to this necessity some time ago, when they chose Martin Kennelly, an upright, able, independent Irish civic leader, for the mayoralty.

KENNELLY HAS PERHAPS emphasized "clean government" too strongly, at the expense of the parks, playgrounds, new schools and such like, that contribute directly to the voters' better welfare. He fits a little more into the old reform pattern and a little less into the new social-welfare-government pattern, than his comparable colleague, Mayor O'Dwyer in New York. Nonetheless, his thorough clean-up in Chicago has won Kennelly a strong position and saved the city for the Democrats.

This does not mean that the transition to the new pattern is not very difficult for the extremely old-fashioned Democratic city machine here. Kennelly's rigid enforcement of the civil service and other laws has cruelly cut into the machine's patronage. Although Kennelly appoints organization Democrats whenever possible, the old-line ward leaders hate the inevitable reduction of their pickings. The Illinois Republican organization, which has certainly not been subjected to any clean-up, has even been able to buy up a number of Arvey's precinct captains for the present election. Yet in the long run, Arvey feels very confident of the success of a smaller, more streamlined Democratic organization, assisted by the appeal of the good government it offers. That is what he is aiming for.

The same transformation is occurring in several of the other great Northern urban organizations of the Democratic Party. The Northern bosses are becoming New Dealers now. This is likely to mean a lot to the Republicans in 1950. And even before 1950, this process will provide a strong new force to counterbalance the inevitable efforts of the Dixiecrat-Southerners to capture control of the Democratic Party's remains.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Ideas Of An Official

ONE OF the Assistant Secretaries of State, Mr. Charles E. Saltzman, has just delivered an address saying that "we know now" that the Soviets "have no intention of cooperating" in the establishment of world order and peace.

LIPPMANN

That is, it seems to me, quite true. But I do not agree with the practical conclusion, which he and so many others in official life and elsewhere draw from it—that since the Russians have violated or frustrated practically all the agreements to "cooperate," no agreement to settle the conflict over Germany can in fact be negotiated, and that the only purpose of continuing to negotiate is to prove to the wishful, the sentimental, and the war-weary masses that we tried patiently to preserve the peace.

THE ERROR, so it seems to me, of those who think like Secretary Saltzman, is in jumping to the conclusion that because we cannot agree to "cooperate," we cannot negotiate a settlement. They are taking it for granted that a negotiated settlement must be an agreement to cooperate. Yet in diplomacy, as in ordinary life, there are many orderly, lawful, peaceable settlements which are not agreements to cooperate but agreements and contracts to separate, to dissolve a partnership, to live apart and be divorced.

In my view the failure of the State Department to form a German policy has been due in the last analysis to this intellectual error: to the notion that if we cannot be partners in Germany, we must be enemies, that if the Big Four cannot be a happy family, they must throw the soup plates at each other at every meal and end by cutting each other's throats.

THIS IS quite obviously Mr. Saltzman's notion of the alternatives, and he is reflecting the prevailing (though not necessarily the final) view in official quarters. Referring, I suppose, to the vaporings of Henry Wallace, he says that in spite of all disillusionment in cooperating with the Soviets "we have been told by some Americans that we could settle our differences with the Soviets if only we would sit down around the conference table and enter into open-minded negotiation." Like Mr. Wallace, with whom he no doubt thinks he altogether disagrees, Mr. Saltzman assumes that the only purpose of a negotiated settlement would be an agreement to cooperate in administering Germany. Mr. Wallace thinks we could cooperate; Mr. Saltzman, quite rightly, has learned that we cannot. But it is not only quite conceivable, indeed it is most likely, that when serious negotiations take place the subject matter will not be another agreement to cooperate, another paper arrangement to have Marshal Sokolovsky and General Clay and General Robertson govern Germany together, another formula by which the four powers promise to continue to stay in Germany and to agree on how to run it.

THE OBJECT of the negotiations will be to make a settlement of the second German war as all great wars have had in the end to be settled: that is to say, by a treaty of peace which delimits frontiers, collects the indemnities, recognizes a de facto government, and stipulates the terms and the time for the military evacuation of the enemy's country.

The idea that wars cannot be settled except by the continuing cooperation of the victors in administering the affairs of the defeated nation produced a newfangled, and quite bizarre, experiment. There were no historic precedents for it, and there has never been any plausible justification for imagining that it could have been made to work successfully. Even among the most like-minded nations a condominium, that is to say the governing of an area by several alien governments, has always proved to be unworkable. Applied to Germany by governments which are irreconcilably contrary-minded, it reflected—so it has from the beginning seemed to some of us—a complete misunderstanding of Germany, of Russia, of Europe, of this country, and of the nature of things.

IT WAS never possible, and it will never be possible, for four powers, severally or jointly, to govern Germany, to reeducate the Germans, to make a German constitution or, sitting in Berlin or Frankfurt or Duesseldorf, to plan, to control, and to regulate the revival of Germany so as to suit their own varied predilections.

The attempt to "cooperate" for these ends has failed because it was bound to fail. The four powers could not cooperate for any such complicated and obscure result. But neither could three powers have done it, nor could two (though they might be more polite about their inevitable disagreements). For the victors in a war against a modern nation cannot govern it. All they can do is to make reasonable terms of peace as quickly as possible, and then go away, leaving the vanquished to face the responsibilities of their own reconstruction, and to adjust themselves to the international system which the new balance of power, resulting from the war, has brought into being.

Surplus Potatoes Save Many Of Wisconsin's Dairy Herds

Surplus potatoes, bought by the Government under the farm price support program—used in some areas to make alcohol—are being utilized in America's chief dairy State, Wisconsin, to make milk.

The spud-buying program has been a four-year headache to Commodity Credit Corporation officials. But in Wisconsin this year it has been a godsend to thousands of small farmers.

A summer drought burned up the hayfields and pastures of this rich dairying country of northern Wisconsin. Sixty of the State's 71 counties were badly hit; 38 of them so seriously that farmers were planning to butcher their milk cows.

Farms Are Small

Each of the 38 counties numbers about 1000 small dairy farms with an average of ten milk cows apiece. The milk is important to the Nation's supply. It is also a butter and cheese making area.

At the special session of Congress, Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) sought an appropriation of five million dollars to save the herds. It failed to pass.

Then CCC stepped in. It shipped in surplus potatoes from Iowa, North and South Dakota. So far 2175 cars—about 1,635,000 bushels have been sent to 60 counties. Four bushels of potatoes are equal to a bushel of corn as dairy feed. The potatoes cost the farmers 15 cents a bushel.

Wisconsin authorities credit the program with saving two to four head of dairy cows in each herd—or 2000 to 4000 head in each county.

Milk Cows Decrease

Because of the high price of meat, dairy herds have been diminishing in recent years. The number of milk cows on January 1 was 2.6 million head less than the year before, and has been declining at a rate of about 5 per cent a year since.

A reduction such as threatened Wisconsin would have seriously affected milk supplies — already below normal.

Government purchases of potatoes up to September 28 totaled 22 million 100-pound sacks. None have been destroyed. Of that total, 682,219 of the 100-pound bags went to school lunches and similar uses; 5½ million to livestock feed, 9½ million to make alcohol, 69,417 to export, about 3 million to potato flour (most shipped to Army occupation areas abroad, half a million to make starch, another half million dehydrated, a quarter of a million into storage. Disposition of the remaining one and three quarters million bags has not yet been reported.

Government Studies Cause Crop Increase

One reason there are so many potatoes is because of studies by Government soil and insect experts.

Before the war potatoes averaged 139 bushels to the acre. In 1947 the average jumped to 182 bushels. This year the average is estimated at 194 bushels an acre. The increase is due to better types of seed (much from Canada), improved insecticides (used both above and below ground), better types of fertilizers, etc.

Thurmond Again Dares Truman to Rights Debate

Richmond, Va., Oct. 10 (AP).—States Rights Presidential Candidate J. Strom Thurmond today renewed his challenge to President Truman to debate the civil rights issue "face to face."

Thurmond, who has been campaigning in Virginia for the past week, sent the President this telegram:

"Again renew my challenge to debate you face to face on the same platform on your so-called civil rights program. Suggest we debate it in Virginia, Texas or Missouri. You name the time and the place."

Thurmond left Williamsburg, Va., later in the day by plane for Columbia, S. C. He returns to Virginia tomorrow for a speech in Lynchburg.

Lumber Prices Weaken In the Lower Grades

A Commerce Department report said last night that lumber prices have been weakening in the lower grades, but holding up generally for the upper grades.

The report said many smaller lumber mills, especially on the West Coast, are "marginal operations" which will quit producing if there are "substantial price declines of any duration."

Of The Limits Of The Law

LIBERTY AGAINST GOVERNMENT, by Edward S. Corwin. (Louisiana State University Press, $3.)

Professor Corwin here becomes the historian of the conflict between the concepts of sovereignty and of natural law in American constitutional theory. By sovereign, of course, is meant the supreme authority within the state, and by the law of nature, a universal authority which transcends that of the sovereign, so that where the will of the sovereign goes contrary to it, that will must be curbed or resisted. Out of this notion, of course, grows the doctrine of natural rights. In medieval England the natural law, becoming equated with "immemorial custom," found expression in the Great Charter and later in the supremacy of the common law into which the principles of the charter were absorbed. As the medieval Parliaments had been guardians of the charter against the King, the English judges became the guardians of the common law against both King and Parliament. In 1610 Sir Edward Coke, whose customary principles of law were afterward translated into terms of political philosophy by John Locke, insisted that parliamentary acts contrary to common law or to the law of nature are void, and here Professor Corwin discovers one of the two premises of the American system of judicial review; the other, of course, being the separation of powers, which appears to have been derived mainly from the theories of Montesquieu. However, the contrary doctrine of the absolute supremacy of the Parliament had also been ingeniously rationalized by the theorists of the Stuart interest, notably Hobbes; and, as subsequently embodied in the celebrated Commentaries of Sir William Blackstone became another profound influence in American constitutional law.

Thus the antagonism of sovereignty and natural rights became evident as early as 1789 in the case of Calder v. Bull involving the power of the Connecticut Legislature to annul a decree of a probate court. The Supreme Court ruled that the constitutional prohibition against ex post facto laws need not apply in civil cases; but Justice Chase took pains to assert that, even in the absence of explicit constitutional restraints, "there are acts which the Federal or State legislatures cannot do without exceeding their authority." Justice Iredell, however, expounded an opposite view, holding that where there are no explicit constitutional prohibitions "whatever the legislative power chose to enact would be lawfully enacted and the judicial power could never interpose to declare it void." However it was Chase's view which at first prevailed. The successive limitations on the legislative power were applied mainly in cases involving property and contracts, and out of them grew the doctrine of "vested rights," which had somehow to be reconciled with the principle of eminent domain. The problem seems to have been resolved for the time being by Chancellor Kent's distinction between merely "regulatory" and "destructive" legislation affecting property. The possibility of collision between the ideas of "liberty" and "equality," which Locke and the earlier constitutional exegetes had assumed to be harmonious and complementary, did not become apparent until after the court had been permeated by Jacksonian influences and by the gospel of popular sovereignty. When Chief Justice Taney, in a famous decision, asserted the "happiness and prosperity of the community" to be prior to the rights of property, the regulatory power became transformed into the "police power." Thus it was that the "due process" clause of the Fifth Amendment, which originally related only to the precedure of trials, came to be invoked against the police power in the defense of "vested rights."

Another great turning point came with the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Amendments, the clear purpose of which, as interpreted by our professor, was to support the principle of equality in the sphere of natural rights against the encroachments of the States. However, the dominant concern of the Supreme Court in the period following the Civil War was to restore, if possible, the equilibrium of State and Federal powers which had been so rudely disturbed by the Secession and the Reconstruction. In the cases involving the Louisiana slaughterhouse monopoly, the court, upholding the right of the Legislature to establish the monopoly, divorced the concept of "privileges and immunities" from that of "due process." Thus gradually the Fourteenth Amendment became the bulwark, not of civil liberties but of property rights, which by now had come to mean corporate business rather than personal proprietorship. Meanwhile, a reaction among the bar to the long reluctance of the court to interfere radically with the local legislatures led to a demand for an unlimited judicial supervision of the State police power. To justify this demand a new conception of natural law was introduced, based on the scientific rather than the philosophic meaning of the term. To put it more crudely than the professor does, the court was to make sure that in the enforcement of contracts there was no interference with the law of natural selection whereby the powerful were enriched at the expense of the weak. This was the view, which, with another recomposition of the court, became ascendant by the end of the century. With the advent of the Great Depression and the New Deal, the principle of "due process" underwent yet another metamorphosis. After Chief Justice Hughes' opinion in the Labor Relations case, it ceased to be a limitation on the legislative power, and became, as the professor tells us, "an actual instigation to legislative action of a leveling character." Thus the question now is whether, with all the pressures upon legislatures for a further equalization of conditions, the principle of judicial review, as an instrument for the protection of liberties against government, can survive.

Professor Corwin does not answer his own question. He seems to agree that the old equation of liberty and property, reasonable enough in a society of small freeholders, is untenable under the conditions of an industrial society. He notes a tendency toward a steadily broader construction of the word "liberty" by the court in cases involving freedom of speech, picketing and the activities of unpopular religious minorities, and also a tendency to restore the old connotation of procedure to the term "due process." Meanwhile, however, the whole concept of natural rights has been under persistent attack from those who wish to hasten the leveling process and have accordingly adopted the positivist principle that law is whatever the sovereign says that it is. The professor seems to imply that the fatal error of their adversaries lay in departing from classical concept of the natural law, which placed its sanction in a universal morality, and seeking a new sanction in the realm of natural science.

Truckers Urged to Support All Who Voted for T-H Law

Members of the trucking industry yesterday were urged to support all Congressmen who backed the Taft-Hartley law regardless of political affiliations. The plea came from Edward J. Buhner, president of the American Trucking Association.

In his annual report to the association's board of directors, meeting at the Statler Hotel for a six-day convention, Buhner said the effect of the law in general "has been all that its authors hoped for, so far as our industry is concerned." He said the "quickie strike" had virtually disappeared and the secondary boycott no longer plagued the industry. Both results he attributed to the law.

Today the executive and resolutions committees of the association will meet to formulate resolutions to be adopted by the convention. James Melton, star of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will sing at an association luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel and Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey will deliver an off-the-cuff speech to members of the industrial relations committee at 4 p. m. at the Mayflower.

New officers of the association will be elected Wednesday. A banquet that night will wind up the convention.

In a roadeo held in connection with the meeting, Chet Smith of Los Angeles won top honors. A driver for the Reliable Trucking Co., Smith placed first in tractor trucks and was awarded the Cummins Trophy and $50-a-month for a year.

In the semitrailer class, Grayson C. Thomas, Burlington, N. C., placed first, winning $600 and a trophy.

Second place in the semitrailer class went to Vernon Hancock, Kansas City, Mo., who received $360 plus a trophy, and third place to Lloyd Baker, Norwalk, Ohio, who received a trophy only.

Winning first place in the obstacle contest in the straight truck class was Thomas Bennane, Detroit, Mich., who also received $600 and a trophy. Second place, with $360 plus trophy, went to J. T. Munro, Biloxi, Miss., and third place, with a trophy only, went to Lester R. Wyatt, Chicago.

Candidate Warren Rests Before Last Leg of Tour

Sioux City, Iowa, Oct. 10 (AP).—Gov. Earl Warren, GOP vice presidential candidate, followed his customary Sabbath routine of attending church and resting here today.

Tonight at 9:15 his special train rolls westward on the last leg of a coast-to-coast campaign which has taken him into some 100 cities since September 15.

His only stop tomorrow is 10 a. m. at Cheyenne, Wyo., en route to Casper for a night address. He is due in Casper at 5:15 p. m. (MST). Remaining major stops are Butte, Mont.; Spokane and Tacoma, Wash.; Eugene, Oreg., and finally Sacramento.

Today was Warren's fourth Sunday on the road. He completes his long swing late next Saturday.

Farm Values Rise 12 Billions In Year, U. S. Figures Show

By John W. Ball

Post Reporter

Some cold statistics from the Federal Reserve Board yesterday indicate that farming is a pretty profitable business.

The over-all value of America's farms, farm buildings, machinery, livestock, crops on hand, bank deposits, savings bonds, and cooperatives, is 12 billion dollars more than a year ago, the board says. It is almost 70 bilion greater—far more than double what it was in 1940.

In spite of this, the board says, more than two-thirds of the farms brought in less than $2500 last year, and one-sixth of them less than $400.

The board reported the value of farm land is 63 billion dollars, compared with 34 billion in 1940. It is four billion more than a year ago.

Total Value 122 Billion

The total value of buildings, machinery, etc., is 122 billion, compared with 53 billion in 1940.

"Proprietors' equities" — the part the farmer owns after mortgages and other debts—is 113 billion, compared with 44 billion in 1940 and 102 billion a year ago.

In other words, the Nation's farmers owe far less money on much more valuable land and equipment, than they did in 1940.

Total farm mortgages in 1940 were 6.5 billion dollars. This year they total 4.8 billion.

The bank-reported total income for agriculture last year was 21,612 million dollars. In 1946 it was 19,190 million. In 1940 it was 6410 million.

1947 Net of 17,058 Million

After paying for labor, rent, interest, etc., the net income to American farms in 1947 was 17,058 million. In 1946 it was 15,183 million. In 1940 it was 6410 million.

"Payments of Federal income taxes," the board states, "now surpass total real estate taxes paid by farmers. Operators retained about 16 billion dollars from 1947 income after paying taxes.

"But the peak in 'real income' may be passed," it added. After the payment of Federal income taxes, the net income of farm operators in 1947 would buy 6 per cent less family maintenance than would the smaller dollar returns of 1946."

But the report indicates that the big money went to the big operators.

"The Census of Agriculture," it states, "shows that in 1944 the total value of farm products sold or used in farm households was less than $2500 in the case of two-thirds of the farms, and less than $400 in the case of one-sixth of the farms.

"Only one-eighth of the farms produced $6000 or more.

"Comparable figures for 1939 are $2500 or less for 89 per cent of the farms, less than $400 for more than one-third of the farms, and $6000 or more for only 2.4 per cent of the farms."

Europe Given 176 Millions

By The Associated Press

Ten of the Marshall Plan countries shared in retovery aid authorizations totaling $176,365,843 last week, the Economic Cooperation Administration reported yesterday.

Just over half of the amount, in the week ended Wednesday, was machinery, equipment and materials to feed Europe's quickening industry. Wheat, tobacco and other food and farm products made up the other 49 per cent.

Wheat has amounted to almost one-third of all the food and agricultural items allocated since the program was begun, with approvals totaling $356,175,331. Wheat flour added another $115,934,349, cotton $77,935,280, meats $65,213,976, fats and oils $95,511,367, and tobacco $36,308,800.

Top industrial item was petroleum, $183,838,095. Others were coal, $150,513,685; nonferrous metals, $128,201,784; vehicles and equipment, $62,454,685; iron and steel products, $44,899,397; machinery, $43,082,606; lumber and sawmill products, $25,399,715; chemicals, $31,956,951.

'Frieda's' Theme Still Smolders

By Richard L. Coe

THE HIPPODROME'S "FRIEDA" tackles an absorbing problem head-on, but too head-on for its own good as a movie.

"Is there such a thing as a good German?" asks this British film about a German girl who goes to wartime Britain as the bride of a flier she risked her life to save from a concentration camp. The answer ultimately is yes, but before it comes too many contrived situations have arisen to make this the engrossing picture it promised to be.

This is always the danger with a timely theme. The immediate circumstances having drifted into the backyard, such a story is likely to stand with its mechanics bared. What may have seemed likely in its peculiar situation in time can appear manipulated, puppet-like, unconvincing.

Ronald Miller, who wrote the successful play from which the film is adapted, foresaw this in his story, which specifically states that once the fighting is over, the girl's German background will be excused by those who at first detest her. He carries his story onward into the peace when this very thing happens, but to do it he has dressed his story with too many characters who represent a point of view and are not flesh and blood people.

Frieda, compellingly played by Mai Zetterling, the appealing Swedish star who appeared in 'Torment," risks her neck to let David Farrar, the British flier, escape. In gratitude he takes her to England as his wife. Demobbed from service while the war is still on, he finds his townspeople resent his wife, distrust him. After a few days at his old teaching job, he gives it up to wait for saner days.

Here subordinate characters enter the plot. His sister in-law, her husband killed in a raid over Cologne, where Frieda's parents had been killed, sees in Farrar the qualities she loved in her husband.

As a Roman Catholic Frieda insists she cannot be Farrar's wife until the proper ceremony is performed, a rite she insists on postponing.

The hero's aunt, acted by Flora Robson, is running for Parliament, making distrust of all Germans her campaign cry.

Frieda's brother arrives in England after the war, apparently as a friendly ally in Polish uniform, only to reveal to her that he remains at heart a Nazi. He is unmasked by a political ally of the aunt, who recognizes him as the Nazi guard who blinded him five years before.

All these aspects tend gradually to vitiate the force of the theme; point it up they do, but the force weakens as the press increases. And when the aunt melodramatically lets the girl go out to drown herself the sheer melodrama is too much for the intelligent approach such a theme requires.

I am not saying that "Frieda's" argument is no longer timely. A visit to the Warner's persuasive March of Time report this week indicates that the theme of "Frieda" is timely as it ever was. Nor can an American deny that a soldier who took a German bride when Nazi rockets were threatening his family roof has much more immediate import for a Britisher than for allies 3000 miles away. Time's report that individual Germans ignore their responsibilty for Hitler and the war suggests all too clearly that they would admire any regime that succeeded in making them the rulers of the earth.

No, "Frieda" presents a theme that still smolders and will continue to smolder in Europe no matter what happens in Berlin. But its story and characters are too contrived to make this the completely satisfactory film one wishes it had been. Essentially on a higher level than most pictures, its problems are greater but its inadequacies remain.

The playing is first-rate, but one wishes the cutter, writer and director had more restraint. And speaking of restraint, has the Hippodrome's sound effects man got a bum ear? Saturday afternoon's soundtrack was uncomfortably loud.

SUMMER'S ON THE ROCKS: This, Metro reports cautiously, is one of the last beach pictures of the year, careful to include "one of the," for it well knows winter isn't winter without Hollywood sunbathers. Dee Turnell, left, will soon be seen in "Words and Music" and Elizabeth Taylor's next is "Little Women." The pooch? Well, it's not a cub of the Metro lion

Some as vivid as memories of Dachau or Buchenwald, some coldly legalistic in their plea, others aloof and demanding, these letters requesting DPs are cascading into Displaced Persons Commission offices at 718 18th st. nw.

Letters Carefully Sorted

There, a staff of women carefully sorts them, setting in motion the machinery which will decide which of Europe's homeless and unwanted unfortunates qualify for entry to the United States under the Displaced Persons Act.

That controversial law, which President Truman attacked as inadequate and discriminatory, provides for the entry of 205,000 homeless Europeans within the next two years.

Hampered by a budget appropriation of two million dollars for the entire project, Ugo Carusi, displaced persons commissioner, is now in Europe completing plans for the first boatload of DPs—826 of them—scheduled to leave Bremerhaven, Germany, about October 21.

Harry N. Rosenfield, acting chairman of the commission in Carusi's absence, recently announced that more than 18,000 requests for displaced persons have been received so far from organizations and individuals, and said the commission hopes to bring 8000 to 9000 here by the end of 1948.

Letters now reach the commission at the rate of 200 or 300 a day. Requests for DPs related to persons in this country are being processed first, while processing of requests for refugees for other purposes — industry, agriculture, domestic help, etc.—awaits completion of State and county committees to correlate them.

About half the States already have established such groups. Governor Lane announced formation of Maryland's committees on September 30, including committees in Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties, saying Maryland could use approximately 1500 DPs.

DPs brought here must not displace someone else in employment; must be paid the prevailing wage rate; must be provided with safe and sanitary housing; must be guaranteed by their sponsors so they will not become public charges, and must be provided with inland transport from their port of entry.

A sampling of the requests received here for DPs showed one from the daughter of a former Budapest surgeon, a Catholic Hungarian.

The daughter arrived here with a brother in July, 1948, while their mother arrived in this country the following month. Pleading that the father should be permitted to join them in Baltimore, the daughter wrote:

"We are very much afraid that a war might break out before he is in this country, and then we would not be able to see him again."

Employment Offered

A Baltimore attorney sent an accompanying letter, guaranteeing housing and employment for the doctor.

An Army major stationed in a nearby Virginia camp, wrote asking for the Lithuanian wife and two children of a relative, now in a DP camp in the American Zone of Germany.

"They are qualified as household workers, and the two girls are also qualified nurses . . . We have been trying to get them over here for a year . . . Can you help us?"

One stack of requests from a single agency asked for specific refugees to be employed as mechanics, stone cutters, carpenters, dressmakers, tailors, truck drivers, rabbis, shoemakers, salesmen, plumbers, farmers, saleswomen, bankers and furriers.

An Arlington resident sought a household domestic, to be provided standard pay rate and "a private room and bath in first-class condition . . .

Must Be "Attractive"

"The only requirements are that she is a woman of attractive appearance, reasonably educated, of good physical condition, honest and loyal."

A Maryland businessman, who wrote, "we are told we bear a good reputation," requested services of "a man, or man and wife . . . any age other than very old . . . nondrinkers.

"We propose to give them a furnished apartment with heat, light, etc., and will pay a salary of $100 per month or more, commensurate with their abilities."

An Army colonel inquired about services of a cook and housemangardener . . . A Congressman forwarded a letter for a man and wife to work on a farm near Washington, plus a nurse for the farm owner's child.

The woman with the sister-in-law in a concentration camp, added . . . "Her entire family, consisting of her mother, two brothers and three children were all killed in the gas chambers by the Nazis . . . I will personally be responsible for her well-being. Just bring her here—please."

Benedict Studied As Deep-Water Port of $150,000 has been authorized for a detailed survey for this program, but as yet only about $19,000 has been appropriated.

Is Third Major Item

Third major item in the waterway scene is the question of a deep-water channel in the Potomac, from Giesboro port—just below the mouth of the Anacostia River—to Chesapeake Bay, a distance of 108 miles, making Washington a deep-water port.

At issue here was the proposed deepening and widening of the 24-foot-deep channel which is maintained in the Potomac River between those two points, to various proposed depths up to 40 feet.

Fourth, and last major waterway proposa in the area is the current one, to establish a deep-water port at Benedict, which is where a British fleet, in 1814, landed the troops who fought in the Battle of Bladensburg and later raided Washington. Benedict, established in 1682, is now a small fishing community.

Little Real Need Found

In making a preliminary study of creating a deep-water port here, as called for by a House Resolution in 1945, the Engineer Corps concluded that Washington had little real need for such facilities.

A board of engineers reported to the Chief of Engineers in July, 1947, after study and hearings conducted by the District Engineer, who advised against the job:

"The Washington and Alexandria metropolitan area . . . is essentially a residential area with few industries . . . Except for unreported ordnance materials shipped during the war, commerce on the Potomac River below Washington averaged 2,500,000 tons annually during the 10 years ending in 1945.

"About 75 per cent of this was short movements of sand and gravel in the vicinity of Washington and Alexandria . . . aside from sand and gravel, commerce . . . has varied little . . . Certain local interests . . . advocate deepening and widening of the Potomac River channel to accommodate ocean-going vessels and believe that this would lead to industrial expansion . . . (but) industries and ship operators have expressed only minor interest in improvement beyond those now authorized . . . Under present conditions, it is unlikely that substantial benefits would result . . ."

Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) and Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (D., Md.) are credited with proposing legislation calling for the present study of Benedict, as an alternative to Washington as a deep-water port. Benedict is only 26 miles from Chesapeake Bay, compared to Washington's 108 miles.

Byron Bird, chief of the engineering division of the District Engineer's Office, said the Benedict proposal would involve a total of about 6 to 7 miles of dredging, based on existing reports, to achieve a 39-foot depth. Present depth is 23 to 39 feet.

The channel, presumably, would have to be about 400 feet wide to accommodate most, but not the largest, ocean-going vessels. The engineer's office will make only a preliminary study of the situation, based on existing reports and a field examination, and this eventually will be forwarded to Congress.

Probably the principal factor in the issue will be the following figures, made available for Friday's hearing for interested parties:

From Norfolk to Washington by water, 195 miles.

From Norfolk to Benedict by water, 136 miles.

From Baltimore to Benedict by water, 96 miles.

From Baltimore to Washington by water, 202 miles.

From Baltimore to Washington by road, 43 miles.

From Benedict to Washington by road, 38 miles.

All ocean-going vessels "entering" Washington or Benedict would come either from Baltimore, or past Norfolk.

Benedict is far closer to both places by water—but goods reaching Benedict from Baltimore by water, and bound for Washington, apparently would have to travel farther by land from Benedict to Washington than they would had they been sent by road from Baltimore to start with. The overall water and land trip from Norfolk to Washington via Benedict would save some miles—but would involve reloading at Benedict.

Another proposal under discussion would give Benedict a straighter and shorter road to Washington, but even as the "crow flies" the distance is 30 miles.

After-Hours Night Clubs Lose in Vote

A 3-to-1 stand against after-hours clubs was taken yesterday in a roundtable discussion of "Should Washington Permit the Operation of After-Hours Clubs."

Charles E. Ford, legal counsel for the clubs, defended them as "organizations established solely for mutual improvement and benefit of members," in the debate broadcast at 7:30 p. m., on Radio Station WINX's District Roundtable.

Legal counsel for a local restaurant association, Walter Bastian, stated his objection to the clubs was that "they are not under jurisdiction of any local control authority."

He added that the early-morning spots are beyond the regulations of the District Fire Department, the First Precinct Police and the District Health Department, "as well as the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board."

Ford rebutted, "The clubs must be approved by all the Captains in the First Precinct before an occupancy permit is issued the organization." "They operate in accordance with congressional law," he added.

Norman A. Bomze, owner of the Four Hundred Restaurant and Lounge, 1423 F st. nw., speculated that after-hour club members could offer liquor to minors from a member's bottle at the club bar, and "it doesn't exactly violate the law, but it violates the spirit of the law."

Here, he said he was referring to the alcoholic beverage control law passed by Congress in 1934, that prohibits sale of liquor to minors.

Ford retaliated: "I don't think after-hour clubs offer any attraction for minors." "I know that restaurants and nightclubs with liquor licenses do offer such attractions."

F. Joseph Donohue, Washington attorney, concluded that he failed to see "what kind of improvement these clubs offer members at 4 and 5 a. m."

Citizens Unit Studies Plan To Circumvent Covenant Ban

The Mount Pleasant Citizens Association will hear a report on the "protective plan" to replace real estate covenants at its 8 p. m. meeting tonight at the Mount Pleasant Branch of the Public Library.

The plan, drawn-up after the Supreme Court ruled property covenants unenforceable, provides that an option be given a chosen representative in the neighborhood when a family decides to sell its home. It will be presented to the Mount Pleasant group by Clifford Newell, former president of the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Covenants will also be discussed by the Hillcrest Citizens Association at a meeting tonight at 8 p. m. in the hall of the East Washington Heights Baptist Church.

Other citizens associations meeting tonight include:

American University Park, 8 p. m., at Hurst Hall, American University. Talk on the Community Chest. Discussion of control of rats around the shopping center.

Brentwood Terrace, 8:30 p. m., 1251 Saratoga ave. ne. Election of officers. Talk by executive director of the Visiting Nurses Society.

Price of Cotton Cloth Cut Again by England

Manchester, England, Oct. 10 (AP). For the eighth time in three months the prices of best quality cotton cloth are being cut Monday because of reductions in the selling rates of raw cotton announced by the United Kingdom bulk buying commission.

Twelve grades of Egyptian cottons are to be cheaper, ranging from a farthing to one and a half pence per pound.

The changes follow a slight decline in Egyptian prices in Alexandria, the general trend of world values being in a downward direction due to prospects of bigger cotton supplies from the main producing areas.

U. S. Film 'Iron Curtain' Sets Off Uruguay Riot

Montevideo, Uruguay, Oct. 10 (AP).—Forty-three persons were arrested in disorders last night around a theater showing the American movie, "Iron Curtain," which deals with Russian spying in Canada.

As the showing began, a group of young men inside the theater began shouting anti-United States and pro-Russian slogans. Stink bombs were set off and acid was thrown on the rugs and seats.

After the arrests the showing was resumed. Another group outside stoned the theater building.

Hospital Insurance Available FOR AGES 60 TO 85

Hospitalization Insurance that covers both accident and sickness is now available to men and women of ages 60 to 85. Fancy Birds Displayed at Pigeon Show

By Robert P. Jordan
Post Reporter

If you think you know a pigeon (feathered variety) when you see one, you'd have rubbed your eyes at what you saw yesterday on Attorney Elisha Hanson's Bethesda lawn.

The only thing most of the 250-odd birds caged there had in common was their name—pigeon.

In size, shape, color and demeanor, most looked and acted like anything but pigeons—that is, the barnyard o. Washington park style.

It was the annual lawn show of the National Capital Pigeon Fanciers Association, and more than 600 persons wandered over Hanson's lawn at 9401 Old Georgetown, rd., Bethesda, to peer at the fanciest birds the pigeon fanciers owned.

One of the pigeons, for example, was the Parlor Tumbler, which can't fly, but makes up for it by acrobatics. Place him on the ground and he'll do a backward flip so fast a camera can't record the action.

The spectators also chortled at the Birmingham Rollers, which also do backward flips, but in the air. When they're in top form, they look more like a blur than anything else.

Among the 25 to 30 varieties of pigeons exhibited also were Oriental Frills, Dragoons, Mookees, Hungarians, Owls, and others.

A partial list of winners for classes in the show were: Turbit, Phillip L. Roof, Hyattsville; Birmingham Roller, George T. Black; Oriental Frill, Henry Clusman, Baltimore; Hungarian, H. D. Kline, Hagerstown; Cropper, O. L. Toms, Hagerstown; Pygmy Pouter, Dr. R. C. Gale, Hagerstown, who also copped the blue ribbon for his Mookee; Owl, Elisha Hanson; Parlor Tumbler, Michael Roof, Hyattsville; Ice Pigeon, Arthur B. Hanson of Bethesda; Show Tumbler, H. S. Fry, Harrisburg, Pa.

This was the most important goal of the Walter Melotts of San Jose, California!

When Walter and Gussie Melott married, they were determined about one thing: They wanted to give their youngsters a far happier childhood, a better start in life than they themselves had ever had.

But how should they go about it? Where would the children be able to lead the healthiest life, learn how to take responsibility, to understand the value of money . . . have a lot of fun, too? Maybe life on a farm would be the best thing?

The Melotts decided to try it and see . . .

Walter Melott's regular income from a farm machinery job made it possible to rent a 30-acre farm and to start a herd of Jerseys. His $3900 a year also provides for family running expenses, savings for children's college, family vacation trips.

Son Doug soon saw the fun and profit in dairying. With father's help he now has $1000 worth of prize-winning Jerseys and show equipment. The prize money will help Doug go to agricultural college . . . his biggest ambition in life!

Young Gary, too, is learning to be a dairyman. Like all the Melotts, he helps with chores, is active in Grange, 4-H projects.

With farm products and smart home management, Mrs. Melott feeds 5 for $800 a year! Rent is $780; clothing, $250.

Yes, the Melotts' goal is being reached! Daughter Jackie's smile speaks for the happiness all the youngsters are finding. Prize-winning homemaking projects prove that she, like her brothers, has good reason to be confident of getting along in the world.

"The children are getting the head-start we wanted for them," says Mr. Melott, "and I'm going to protect it with life insurance. I have some of this protection already, and I plan to get more from time to time."

Gary makes money raising Angora rabbits. He wants a lot of them. His family dreams of having a profitable herd of pure-bred Jerseys, their own farm.

THE LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES AND THEIR AGENTS

BRING YOU THIS STORY BECAUSE... families like the Melotts show us one way that happiness is earned! You, yourself, probably know a family, right in your own town, that is getting ahead in the same typically American way. Such families prove to all of us that we can solve our own problems by our own efforts. . . . Their example shows too why it is so important for us to hold to our rights to think for ourselves, to work at what we like, to live as we choose. For what this country amounts to depends upon what happens to its homes!

School Enrollment Census Starts Soon

An estimate of Nation-wide school enrollments will be made by the Census Bureau on the basis of questions to be asked 25,000 representative families in 68 communities.

The bureau announced yesterday that as part of its October population survey it will quiz the families to determine the number of school children, the grade they attend, the number in public school, and, if out of school, the highest grade completed.

Selected families in Washington and the adjoining counties will participate in the survey, District Supervisor Robert W. Rensing said. The number of local interviews will not be sufficient, though, to provide the basis for local estimates.

Results of the survey will help in planning for increased school enrollments resulting from high wartime birthrates, he said.

Ex-Ambassador Lane Lauds Pulaski at D. C. Statue Rites

The Washington Post

General view of ceremonies at Pulaski Statue in Post Square

About 60 persons gathered around the statue of General Casimer Pulaski on Pennsylvania ave. between 13th and 14th sts. nw. yesterday to pay tribute to the Polish patriot who gave his life 169 years ago in America's Revolutionary War.

Former Ambassador to Poland, Arthur Bliss Lane, praised the Polish count "who so unselfishly offered his life on the altar of freedom of a new Nation." Bliss also placed a wreath on Pulaski's statue.

Matter For Shame

Referring to Communist domination of Poland, Lane went on to say that Americans today "should be bowing our heads in shame that our Nation, which helped to formulate the principles of the Atlantic Charter, was later instrumental in throwing the Polish people into slavery."

Paul Zaleski, representative of the Polish Peasant Party, in opposition to the Communists, expressed sorrow at Poland's "terrible bondage of Soviet Communist imperialism."

Third speaker at the ceremonies was Jan Ciechanowski, wartime Polish Ambassador to the United States, who said that Russia, "still strangles Poland, and has drawn her away from the western civilization to which she so naturally belongs."

Other Participants

Other participants in yesterday's celebration, which preceded Nation-wide observance of Pulaski Memorial Day today, were the Polish American Congress, sponsors of the observance, the Polish Club of Washington, whose President Edward C. Sokolowski was master of ceremonies, Group 848 of the Polish National Alliance, Group 634 of the Polish Women's Alliance, and the Polonaise Cultural Society.

Homecoming Celebration at GWU Oct. 22

A parade, dance, coed queen contest, and guided tours will mark George Washington University's annual homecoming celebration scheduled for October 22 and 23, as announced yesterday.

Activities get underway the evening of October 22 with a rally at Lisner Auditorium, to feature selection of a coed to reign as homecoming queen, 1948. Dr. Alexander Wetmore, president of the general alumni association and secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, will crown the winner. Among judges will be Dean Henry Grattan Doyle and David Pollard, who is on the Washington staff of United Artists.

Coach "Bo" Rowland will speak and the university band and cheerleaders will perform. Fraternities will hold open house after the rally.

The next morning, alumni will be received in Columbia House. At 12:30 p. m. Robert E. Freer, chairman of the Federal Trade Commission and university trustee, will head a float parade of 60 units, which will proceed to Griffith Stadium for the football game with the University of Maryland.

Jimmy Dorsey and his orchestra will play for the homecoming ball in Uline Arena at 9 p. m.

Schuman Pays Quick Visit to Germany

Frankfurt, Germany, Oct. 10 (AP).—French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman paid a surprise visit to Germany today.

He arrived by air at Coblenz, saying his visit was of a private character.

During the afternoon he talked with Peter Altmeier, minister president of the German state of Rheinland-Pfalz in the French zone, and with high-ranking German church officials.

Arlington School Bond Issue Debated

John Locke Green, Arlington County treasurer, yesterday was accused of having a "heart of stone" because he "quibbles" about paying enough to give Arlington children needed school facilities.

The accusation was hurled by Dr. Oscar LeBeau, former chairman of the Citizens Committee for School Improvement, in a radio debate over WARL, paid for by Green.

Dr. LeBeau and Rolland W. Stoebe, chairman of the coordinating council for the Arlington school bond campaign, took the affirmative side in a discussion with Green over merits of the proposed $5,000,000 school bond issue.

Green contended the bond issue would cost Arlington taxpayers from 65 to 75 cents more per $100. Said he, "If this bond issue is voted and the taxes go up as outlined, how will the problem of storm sewers, sidewalks, health improvements and other capital improvements be met without a further increase in the taxes?"

Brooke Johns To 'Triple' as Disc Jockey

BROOKE JOHNS
Commissioner takes on new job

"Good morning kiddies, mothers and dads. This is your family program being broadcast from deep in the heart of Maryland."

The voice you will hear, will be that of Greater Washington's newest disc jockey — Brooke Johns, president of the Montgomery County Commissioners, gentleman farmer and former Ziegfeld Follies star.

Starting today, he will give out with the chit-chat, recorded music and, of course, a few commercials, six days a week from 8 to 9:15 a. m. over Bethesda's radio station WBCC.

No stranger to the entertainment world, Johns isn't worried about "mike fright" although a daily turn before the microphone will be something new.

"I'm just going to make it a homey program. There will be news about some of the people in the smaller up-county towns. Now and then I'll bring some of my youngsters into the program," he explained.

The program will be broadcast directly from Johns' farm in Norbeck, where he lives with his wife, six children and two grandchildren—a large family of which he is very proud. The farm—he has a dairy herd of 60 cows—and the bucolic life will provide plenty of subject matter for ad libbing, he expects.

Counsel for the National Labor Relations Board took several actions last night aimed at an alleged "secondary boycott" by the Denver, Colo., Building & Construction Trades Council (AFL).

NLRB Counsel Stanford B. Teu appealed to the board for a reversal of a decision by its Denver trial examiner, Howard Myers. Teu also asked the tenth Circuit Court of Appeals, Denver, to reverse a ruling of Federal District Judge J. Foster Symes.

Symes refused the NLRB counsel's request for an injunction against the union on the grounds that the board has no jurisdiction in the case.

Subsequently, Trial Examiner Myers suspended hearings on the grounds that Symes' decision was binding on him.

The case arose when union members employed by the Acme Electric Co. and the McCarthy-Johnson Plumbing Co. of Denver refused to install part of a soda fountain in a drugstore belonging to T. J. Quigley in Aurora, Colo.

They declined on the grounds that the Grauman Co., which sold the soda fountain to Quigley and whose employes were helping to install it, is not unionized. Grauman is on the union's "unfair" list.

Symes ruled that, since union members' services were hired by Quigley, the dispute does not affect interstate commerce.

But the NLRB counsel contends that it does because the boycott is aimed at Grauman. Grauman, according to the counsel, purchased $100,000 worth of raw materials outside of Colorado this year and sold $100,000 worth of products outside of the State.

Jews Are Urged To Fight Bias by Good Citizenship

Richmond, Va., Oct. 10 (AP).—Milton W. King, vice president of the American Jewish Committee, today told Jews assembled here to help fight anti-Semitism to be good citizens in community activities as their individual contribution.

"Make men realize you are an American, not a Jew," King told the more than 200 delegates attending the first Virginia-Carolinas Regional Conference of the Joint Defense Appeal.

The organization is the financial arm of the American Jewish Committee and the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, national agencies devoted to promoting inter-group harmony and religious tolerance.

Cocky Braves Pick Voiselle, Sain for 6th, 7th Games

WELCOME HOME, MR. ELLIOTT—Tommy Holmes, who scored ahead of him, greets Bob Elliott, Braves third baseman, as Elliott reaches home plate after whacking a three-run homer against Bobby Feller in the first inning yesterday. Shortstop Alvin Dark was also on base when Elliott connected for the first of his two wallops. Elliott's two homers, which featured Boston's 11-5 victory yesterday, sent thousands of Boston fans (right) scurrying to Braves Field to purchase tickets for today

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

CLEVELAND, Oct. 10.—Gee whizz, the Braves were wunnerful today. They were the club that Boston took to its heart, the never-give-up, who-do-you-think-you-are ball club that wins ball games they aren't supposed to win at all.

POVICH

Never did any club ever face a darker prospect of being closed out in a World Series than the situation that confronted the Braves today. All during the series they were punchless at bat, could exhibit only one good pitcher, were a jittery outfit in the field, and didn't have Johnny Sain going for them.

And today they were facing Bob Feller, the guy who held them to two hits in the series opener. At 1 p. m. the Braves were a disgrace to the National League, inviting ridicule on National League pennant winners, with only three runs to show for their first four games of the series. Today was supposed to be the final humiliation of the Braves. There was wonder how they ever got into a World Series. The team of destiny was just a catch-phrase invented by excitable Boston writers.

But ya should've seen those Braves today. They didn't have Sain going for them, but they had going for them something just as effective. In a gee whizz piece like this its permissible to say that they had the old fight, and the guts to come out swinging and they did. It took a lot of doing to beat Bob Feller, but they slapped him down as if he were Joe Doaks. They fell behind, 5-4, in the middle innings, but that didn't make any difference. They tied the score and then poured it on.

SO IT WAS FELLER they were facing, so what? In the first inning they went out and got as many runs off him as they had made in the first four series games. Tommy Holmes bashed the second pitch for a single. Alvin Dark singled right away, too, before anybody was out. Torgeson didn't get a hit but he stung Walt Judnich's glove hand with a line drive that was fiery. Feller wasn't awing anybody.

And then Bob Elliott moved in. He was the guy today. Elliott was going down as the hitting flop of the series, the Braves' clean-up hitter, who had popped up and hit into double plays with men on bases. But not today. He got the Braves off to a 3-0 lead with a long home run into the right-field stands, yet, despite the fact he hits right-handed.

Elliott was showing the Braves how. Next time up he made it two for two, with another home run into the left-field seats. This guy Feller wasn't kidding the Braves. That motion of his may look fierce, but he had to throw the same kind of a baseball they use in the National League, the kind the Braves hit all season when they won the pennant. They had old man Potter pitching for 'em, and he went as far as he could, and when he tired there was Warren Spahn, who since the first inning had been looking eagerly for Billy Southworth's signal to get in there and pitch. Spahn had a special motive, you know. The Indians had knocked him out in the second game, and he was aching to get back at them. His chance came.

And when it did, Spahn was wonderful. No jitters, plenty of poise. He just unsnaked that long left arm and stood the Indians on their ears with five consecutive innings of shut-out pitching, marked by only one Cleveland hit.

THE INVITATION WAS there for the Braves to fold today after Jim Hogan's three-run homer wiped out their lead and left 'em trailing, 5-4. They didn't. Marv Rickert, the guy who hit a home run yesterday, was struck out by Bob Feller opening the sixth. Feller seemingly had recovered from his early inning troubles and was on his way to winning a badly pitched ball game in contrast to the two-hitter he blew in Boston.

Bill Salkeld took up the torch for the Braves then. With one strike, a home-run stroke into the right-field seats, he tied the score. Now it was different, a new ball game, and the Braves weren't going to lose it, not with Spahn out there defeating the Indians, and Feller being exposed as just another pitcher after all.

Six runs for the Braves in the seventh. Hits buzzing past Feller, past Klieman, past Christopher like hornets, all of them singles but stingers. The Braves were everybody's ball club today.

Braves Say They Are Glad Feller's Around to Pitch

CLEVELAND, Oct. 10 (U.P.).—"Thank God for Bobby Feller."

That was the winning war whoop of the Battling Boston Braves tonight after polishing off baseball's highest priced pitcher in the fifth game of the World Series.

It was Tommy Holmes who offered up that shouting thanks. The chunky outfielder—whose hit beat Feller in the opening game—set the tempo today, too. He singled the first time up as the game opened and led off that fantastic seventh inning rally with his second hit of the emotion packed afternoon.

"I knew we had him right there in the first inning," Holmes said. "He didn't have a good curve and there wasn't any smoke on that fast ball."

Bob Elliott, the guy who was on his way to being the goat of the series after three errors in the first two games, looked up from his dressing and added:

"Man, I was sorry to see them take him out."

IT BROUGHT a howl of delight from the Braves, who were rushing to catch their train to Boston. For it was Elliott, the most valuable player in the National League last year and a bust up to now in the classic, who pickled two gigantic home runs that helped beat Bullet Bob.

"One was a fast ball and the other a curve," Elliott shouted over the dressing room din. "I sure hated to see him go."

The players agreed that Feller just didn't have it this hazy afternoon.

Feller Routed; Elliott Slams 2 Homers

vain after Jim Hegan belted a three-run homer that moved Cleveland in front, 5-4, the Boston club piled five singles into a decisive six-run seventh inning.

Elliott it was who sounded the tocsin for the Braves and exposed Feller as just another mortal, not the super man who was going to put an end to this World Series today. But when the going got tough in the middle innings, the Braves found another hero in Warren Spahn.

Before Spahn was to assert his mastery over the Indians, though, Catcher Bill Salkeld put the game back on an even keel for the Braves with a home run off Feller that tied the score at 5-5 in the sixth inning.

Spahn took over after Nelson Potter, the 37-year-old relic of the American League, pitched away the four-run lead Elliott's homers gave him in the first three innings. Hegan's homer that knocked in three Cleveland runs, knocked Potter out of the box.

Then Spahn, the Braves' pitching flop of the second game, took over and his comeback was a dazzling thing. The gawkish left-hander with the knuckle ball and the bull-whip curve permittted only one Indian to reach base after one was out in the fourth inning.

Spahn breezed. Only Lou Boudreau could hit him. The Cleveland manager doubled to center to start off the eighth, and that was all. Spahn poured it on and poured it on. He wasn't going to let it get away. After Boudreau doubled, Spahn calmly struck out the fat middle of the Indians' batting order, Gordon, Keltner and Pinch-Hitter Ray Boone in the eighth.

And for the ninth he reserved a final fillip. The Indians went down one-two-three. Robinson produced the high-water mark of the Indians' ninth. He flied tamely to left field. Hegan, the home-run guy, Spahn struck out. The Indians sent Joe Tipton in to bat for their fifth pitcher, Bob Muncrief, and Spahn struck him out, too.

Lemon Vs. Voiselle Today

And so they resume in Boston tomorrow, with the Braves scenting the $6722 winner's share for each player once more despite the Indians' 3-2 lead in games. But Manager Billy Southworth, as today, again faces a pitching situation unlike Manager Boudreau.

Boudreau will start Bob Lemon, his second-game winner by a 4-1 score. Southworth is turning to his right-handed veteran, Bill Voiselle, used previously only as a relief man in yesterday's fourth game.

In vain, Boudreau tossed five pitchers in today's massacre. Ed Klieman followed Feller into the maw of that big six-run seventh inning of the Braves, and before it was over, Russ Christopher and Satchel Paige also saw service, too.

The angular Paige was Cleveland's fourth pitcher in the big inning, an even more skeletonized version of the skinny Christopher, and he stepped into the breach to put out the fire, but he didn't escape without incident.

Satchmo balked Eddie Stanky to second base despite a previous warning by the umpires that his hesitation windup was illegal. Umpire Bill Grieve at third called the balk.

Elliott Redeems Self

The Braves didn't dally with Feller. On his first seven pitches the Braves collected three runs to disillusion the Cleveland notion that this was going to be a soft touch for their strikeout king.

Tommy Holmes banged Feller's second pitch for a single to right, and Alvin Dark rapped Feller's fifth pitch for a twisting grounder past the box that Keltner couldn't field and it went as a single. The Indians needed nobody as much as their old hero, Bill Wambsganss, who was sitting in the stands famed for his unassisted triple play of the 1920 series.

Now it was Elliott facing Feller, and from his pate was beginning to grow a goatish set of horns traced to his batting failures of the first four games when he was habitually leaving runners on base. Elliott recouped everything though on the second pitch he saw from Feller.

He whaled it on a line into the unhappy tapestry of Cleveland faces beyond the right field wire barrier where the sign says "365 feet," a prodigious clout for a right-handed hitter. Braves, 3; Cleveland, 0.

Elliott Booms Another

But it was to be a battle of homers. Potter saw his lead begin wasting on the second pitch he threw in the opening inning. Dale Mitchell whacked it far over the right field marker at the 365 foot sign, and the Indians had a run. There was more trouble for Potter in the inning when Boudreau beat out a single off the pitcher's glove and Gordon walked with one out, but he disposed of Keltner on a pop foul and got Judnich on a tame infield grounder.

Feller worked on Elliott carefully the next time he saw him—in the third inning with two out—but it was useless—he pitched him inside in contrast to the home run ball he had served the big guy outside in the first inning, and Elliott took a liking to that pitch too. He swatted his second homer into the left field seats, just for variety, and the Braves had a 4-1 lead.

Spahn Relieves Potter

Potter seemingly was steadying going into the fourth, but then came collapse. Joe Gordon reached him for a single to left, and Keltner drew a walk. Judnich pelted a soft single into short center and Gordon raced home with Keltner moving to third with one out.

The tension was eased for Potter when Robinson lined softly to Dark, but Hegan swung for the fences and reached them with a three-run homer over the left-field barrier. Now, 5-4 Cleveland.

Southworth waved Spahn onto the scene at that point, and the Indians subsided, but it wasn't looking good for the Braves. Feller in the fourth and fifth had yielded only a lone hit, and his fast ball was getting full duty after the early assaults on his curve.

He struck out Marv Rickert opening the sixth, and then faced up to Bill Salkeld, the Braves' .243-hitting catcher. On the first pitch, Salkeld hit the day's fifth home run, a booming blast into the right-field sector that dwarfed today's other homers into that territory, and it was a new ball game with the score tied at 5-5.

Then came Feller's second defeat in two starts in the series. He was wavering in the seventh when Holmes singled into center and the Braves were playing for one run before they saw all the possibilities of a big inning. Dark laid down the conventional sacrifice and Torgeson smacked a fiery single to center to score Holmes.

The signal for Feller to get out of there came surreptitiously from Manager Lou Boudreau, apparently, because Rapid Robin was on his way to the showers without delay after Torgeson's belt. In moved Klieman and it became a rout. He walked Bob Elliott, and a single to center by Rickert precipitated a whole lot of things.

Rickert's hit scored Torgeson from second with the second run of the inning, and on the play Larry Doby threw wild in an attempt to flag down Elliott who was racing into third. The ball skipped past Keltner and the happy Braves surged out of their dugout to wave the loose pellet into their dugout with their caps. It went in, and under the ground rules Elliott scored and Rickert was waved to third.

Now the Braves had three runs in and a 8-5 lead, but they weren't through. Klieman was, though, after he issued a walk to Salkeld. Christopher moved in and he was a total loss to the Indians.

The two men he faced, Mike McCormick and Eddie Stanky, reached him for singles to right, and the Indians had their fourth and fifth runs of the inning.

Stanky's blow was a curious thing. He threw his bat at an outside pitch and was empty handed when it landed in short right for a single.

Paige heard the call then. He moved into the accompaniment of loud roars from the multitude, and was quickly warned of his balk motion on his first pitch to Spahn. The Braves' pitcher produced a long fly to Doby that moved McCormick home from third with the Braves' sixth run of the session.

The rest of the inning wasn't without incident, though. Before he got the Braves out, Paige balked Stanky to second base, with third-base Umpire Grieve calling him on his hesitation pitch.

Now the Braves had their 11-5 lead, and they also had Spahn as a guarantee that the Indians were going to stay dead today.

As the manager hurried off to the shower, Warren Spahn, the slender southpaw who turned in an outstanding relief job after he replaced Potter in the fourth inning, took up the explanations.

"I wasn't any better than usual, but maybe that background helped me. They sure were missing that fast ball."

A large section of green-painted bleachers is kept vacant to provide a "background" for the hitters, but Spahn's sidearm pitches didn't come to the plate from that direction. He appeared to be bringing the ball out of the thousands of standees on the sloping ramp in front of the bleachers.

Pick-the-Winners List Out Tuesday

List of games for the second week of The Washington Post's Pick-the-Winners football contest will be published in Tuesday morning's paper.

The winner of the first week of the contest will probably be announced Thursday morning, if the thousands of entries received can be graded by that time.

Each weekly winner receives two (2) tickets to the Army-Navy game in Philadelphia, November 27, with an all-expenses-paid trip to the big game for two persons. He also receives four (4) tickets to a major college or professional game in this area to be selected by The Washington Post.

Auto Racer Ted Horn Dies in Crash

Du Quoin, Ill., Oct. 10 (AP).—Ted Horn, 38, national auto racing champion and one of the most consistent money winners of all time at the Indianapolis Speedway, was injured fatally today in a 100-mile race at the Illinois Fair Grounds.

The veteran driver from Paterson, N. J., was injured when his car went out of control on the second lap of an AAA-sponsored race and careened into another racer. Horn died at Marshall-Browning Hospital.

The other driver, Johnny Mantz, was injured slightly in the crack-up and released form the hospital after treatment.

The race was more or less a token appearance for Horn, who already had clinched the American Automobile Association racing championship for the third straight year.

Illinois State police said Horn was on the second lap of the 100-mile contest when a wheel spindle broke, throwing the car out of control.

Horn was thrown out on the track just before his car struck Mantz's machine. Both drivers were rushed to the hospital and Horn was pronounced dead 20 minutes after his arrival. His injuries were described as "a concussion, crushed chest and fractured left leg."

Horn's car was running fifth at the time of the accident. Horn's wife, Gerry, was among the 5000 spectators who witnessed the race and the crash.

Horn, although he never won the big 500-mile Memorial Day race at Indianapolis, reportedly won more than $55,000 since his first start in the classic in 1935.

He placed fourth in the Memorial Day race last May.

Horn failed to finish in his first Indianapolis start in 1935 but he was never farther back than fourth in nine subsequent races. He was second in 1936, less than two minutes behind Louis Meyers.

DiMaggio Reported Signing at $85,000; Topping Denies It

New York, Oct. 10 (AP).—The News said tonight it had learned Joe DiMaggio has signed his 1949 contract with the New York Yankees for $85,000, although Club President Dan Topping denied it.

Informed of the report, Topping said:

"It is not true. We haven't even talked about a 1949 contract yet. Joe will be with the Yankees as long as he wants to be.

The News story also said the Yankee managerial sweepstakes includes Jimmy Dykes, Al Simmons, Casey Stengel, Johnny Neun and Bill Skiff.

"The new manager is in that group," Topping was quoted as saying. "And while the New York News wrote Dykes was my candidate, Stengel was Webb's and Neun or Skiff was Weiss' choice, you can be assured our new manager is not the choice of any single individual. He is the unanimous choice of three of us."

'Picked Me to Tee Off On,' Frustrated Feller Laments

From Press Dispatches

Cleveland, Oct. 10. — Bob Feller had no alibis today for a poor showing in the Fifth World Series game, but lamented loudly the fact that the Braves "had to pick me to tee off on."

"I've got no excuses," the fast ball artist said as he and the rest of the Cleveland Indians did a rush job of packing to catch an "unexpected" train to Boston.

"It was the usual story of having no control," he said. "When I don't have control, I get hit. Today I couldn't get loose and my control wasn't there. Maybe some day I'll win a World Series yet."

He had tried, and tried hard last Wednesday in the opening game, only to lose, 1-0, after hurling a two-hitter.

Today he was out there trying again, but the Braves found the range and Bob came out in the seventh inning.

It was an unforgettable sight when he left the game.

He walked away with that mincy little step he has. But his head was down.

There was almost silence in the incredibly big and frustrated crowd, which had gathered to scream in victory and now sat in almost hostile moodiness. Few could bring themselves to applaud a fellow whose personal grief at this point must have been of a nature which could affect the rest of his pitching life.

To Steelers

'Skins Lose 10 to 7, on Field Goal

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Forbes Field, Pittsburgh, Oct. 10.—The Pittsburgh Steelers had their turn today, and beat the Washington Redskins, 10-7.

In a duplication of the Redskins' triumph in their league opener—but with all the joy on the other side—the Smoky City lads waited until the last minute to win on a field goal by Joe Glamp.

The team that was whipped by Washington, 17-14, on Dick Poillon's field goal with 16 seconds left, waited until only 33 seconds remaining for Glamp's victorious effort from the 12-yard line today.

STATISTICS

Washington		Pittsburgh
15	First downs	17
122	Net yards gained rushing	87
24	Forward passes attempted	24
13	Forward passes completed	8
121	Yards forward passing	113
2	Forwards intercepted by	3
62	Yards gained runback interceptions	72
39	Punting average	43
61	Total yards all kicks returned	26
0	Opponents' fumbles recovered	3
160	Yards lost by penalties	65

With the victory, achieved on a slippery field before a crowd of 28,969 Sheeler rooters, the hosts joined Washington in a deadlock for leadership of the Eastern Division, National Football League. Each team has now won two and lost one.

Pittsburgh's own special brand of fog and rain enveloped the field for most of the game. And at the end there were some fans, no doubt, who thought it was time Glamp was getting one of his placements between the uprights.

The payoff kick was Glamp's sixth try of the day and came in the wildest sort of windup the wild pro game could produce. It capped a rather slow game, marked by numerous fumbles, that didn't get really interesting until midway of the third quarter.

That was when the Steelers broke a scoreless state of affairs with a 75-yard march that ended with Johnny (Zero) Clement going over from two yards out. Glamp kicked the extra point.

Washington started the tying march on the kickoff after that, but it wasn't until four minutes of the final period had elapsed that Sammy Baugh got in a 19-yard touchdown pass to rookie Hal Crisler.

'Skins Penalized 17 Times

The 'Skins were credited with 65 yards on their goalward march, but the ball actually moved 210 yards — backward and forward. Sandwiched in the onslaught were six penalties, contributing to a total of 23 for the game, a league record, the most previously being 22 between Brooklyn and Greeen Bay in 1944. Washington was fined 17 times, a new team record, and its miscues accounted for a loss of 160 yards.

With the count tied at 7-7, Washington's final important chance to win the game came with two minutes of action left. In an attempt to confound the Steeler defenders, End Hugh Taylor came into the backfield and hurled a long pass to Crisler on the Steelers' 35. It was a little short, and on a pass later, the home team took over on Washington's 41.

The home team and officials took over. Clement got in a 16-yard toss to Glamp before the striped shirts became dominant. Then the Redskins were charged with rushing as Bob Nussbaumer intercepted Clement's pass. They were offsides as Glamp missed his fifth 3-pointer from the 21, and offsides again before Glamp could get his toe into the ball on the next line-up.

Finally the line of scrimmage was Washington's 3 as Glamp booted a high, straight one from the 12. Pittsburgh was threatening to add a bit of insurance at

Cards Drub Green Bay By 17 to 7

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 10 (AP).—High class football was sadly wanting today as the Chicago Cardinals outpointed the Green Bay Packers, 17-7, in a dreary National League game before 34,369 fans, the largest crowd ever to see a football game here.

The league champion Cardinals, playing without ace Quarterback Paul Christman who fractured his left wrist a week ago, flashed brief glimpses of their power but counted their two touchdowns on sharp-explosive bursts. There wasn't a sustained scoring drive in the game.

The victory for the Cards was their second in three league starts and left them in second place in Western Division standings behind the Chicago Bears, victors today over Los Angeles.

Green Bay, dropping its second league tilt, slid nearly to the bottom of the divisional standings and virtually was eliminated from any title consideration.

Elmer Angsman and Charley Trippi were hot-shots of the Cardinal attack which rolled up 325 yards rushing but sputtered when the chips were down The Cardinals added 51 yards pasing on seven completions in 15 attempts, with Ray Mallouf doing most of the tossing.

Angsman turned in the prettiest run of the drab afternoon. The ex-Notre Dame ace skirted wide around his own left end midway of the first quarter and danced down the side lines 72 yards for the Cardinals' first touchdown after Jack Jacobs had punted 79 yards dead to the Chicago 19-yard line. Trippi picked up the extra nine a play before Angsman flashed his sprint.

Trippi cashed the other Cardinal score returning a Jacobs punt 49 yards near the close of the second quarter.

Pat Harder kicked the points and also booted a 10-yard field goal early in the fourth quarter to conclude Cardinal scoring.

Eagles Top Giants, 45-0; Thompson Stars

Philadelphia, Oct. 10 (AP). — Tommy Thompson's passing and a viciously charging line led the Philadelphia Eagles to their first National Football League victory of the season today, 45 to 0, over the New York Giants.

Thompson passed for two touchdowns, bucked over for a six-pointer and set up another score as he directed the Eagle attack in brilliant fashion.

The Eagles, who had lost once and tied once this season, unleashed their biggest offensive of the year late in the first period.

After Fullback Jack Myers partially blocked Frank Reagan's punt, the Eagles drove 57 yards for a touchdown. A series of Thompson passes moved the ball to the Giant four from where Steve Van Buren smashed over. Cliff Patton converted the first of six extra points.

Thompson passed three yards to End Pete Pihos who galloped 25 more for the second Eagle six pointer and shortly afterwards Thompson found Ernie Steele in the end zone with a 33-yard scoring aerial.

The Eagles completed their rout in the second half on a 27 yard field goal by Patton; a one yard quarterback sneak by Thompson; a 66-yard sprint by Ben Kish and a seven-yard sweep by Jim Parmer, rookie from Oklahoma A. & M.

The Giants never had a chance, advancing into enemy territory only once when they reached the Eagle 42 in the fourth period.

Lu Gambino Scores One For Colts

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Baltimore, Oct. 10. — The San Francisco '49ers, found a gold mine here today and worked it overtime, carrying away a 56-14 haul from the Baltimore Colts.

The touchdown bonanza was the biggest the '49ers have ever struck and enabled them to secure their hold on the All-America Conference's Western Division with an unblemished record of seven consecutive victories.

For the 37,209 customers, it was a long, bitter afternoon which left them with only one consoling thought—the Colts, ironically enough, still lead the Eastern Division.

The New York Yankees victory over Buffalo left the Colts in first place with a 3-3 record.

Score Eight Times

The '49ers rumbled to eight touchdowns, one in the first quarter, which the Colts matched; three in the second period and two in the third and fourth quarters.

Baltimore's second score also came in the final period and was produced by Lu Gambino, the disfranchised Maryland halfback who breezed 40 yards to reduce the landslide to a mere rout.

Quarterback Frankie Albert, the southpaw pitcher who chucked Clark Shaugnessy's 1940 Stanford team into the Rose Bowl, passed the '49ers to three touchdowns, scored one himself and gave addition demonstration of his versatility by racing around end for a conversion after 'Frisco's fifth score.

Halfback Joe Vetrano almost outscored the Colts single-footedly. He boosted seven conversions and had the Colts tied until Gambino's fourth-quarter touchdown.

Carr Scores Twice

Seven different '49ers took part in the scoring parade with Halfback Eddie Carr registering twice. Albert had one, while John Stryzkalski, Vern Lillywhite, Al Beals, Joe Perry and Norm Maloney also broke into the scoring column.

Stormy Pfohl went over for the Colts on a pass from Y. A. Tittle in the first period and his was the only Baltimore name in the scoring column until Gambino joined him in the waning moments of the game.

'49ers Need Six Minutes

It took the '49ers fully six minutes to get going, but when they did, they weren't to be stopped until the game-ending gun sounded. Albert climaxed a 50-yard drive with a 6-yard strike to Stryzkalski for Touchdown No. 1.

The Colts matched that with a 45-yard march which ended when Y. A. Tittle flipped to Stormy Pfohl for 9 yards. Rex Grossman's conversion tied the score, and it remained that way until the second quarter when the '49ers really staked their claim to victory with three more touchdowns to hold a 28-7 halftime edge.

Gambino, held out the first half, got his chance shortly after intermisison, and made good—for San Francisco—immediately. He fumbled on the Colt 30 and the '49ers recovered and converted Gambino's boot into another touchdown. Joe Perry dived over from the three for this Frisco score.

Cooper, Le Brun Meet At Turner's Tonight

It'll be Jimmy Cooper's aspiring youth against Leo LeBrun's experience tonight in the eight-round feature bout at Turner's Arena.

Cooper has his partisan U st. followers agog with the fine showing he's made in his first year of professional boxing.

The 19-year-old featherweight has lost but twice in 12 bouts and removed the stigma of one of those by knocking out his conqueror, Joe Kay, in a return meeting.

His reputation around here will get a husky boost if he can stop LeBrun, a little French Canadian who's campaigned with the best of them for several years. LeBrun even boasts an impressive though unsuccessful bid for Willie Pep's featherweight crown last year.

More to the point, LaBrun has beaten Jose Cardenas, who was responsible for the second of Cooper's defeats last year.

Another good record goes on the block in tonight's semifinal when Red Gaddis, with 18 wins in his last 19 fights, meets Baltimore's Lee Murray in a scheduled eight-rounder.

The lesser bouts feature all hometown talent in the following four-rounders: Kid Ferris against Walter Ham, Granfis Jones against Jackie Ford, Ben Harrison against Rufe Williams and King Dave against Nate Palmer. First bout starts at 8:45.

Yanks Edge Bills, 14-13, In Last Half

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 10 (AP).—The New York Yankees made up a 13-0 deficit in the last half today to nip the Buffalo Bills, 14 to 13, in an All-America Conference football game before 18,825 spectators in Civic Stadium. Harvey Johnson's fifty-second consecutive extra-point kick gave the visitors the decision.

Orban (Spec) Sanders, New York's All-Conference halfback, led the decisive drives, scoring the Yankees' first touchdown on a 4-yard sweep, then passing to Lowell Wagner for 53 yards and the second score, five minutes before the gun.

The Bills appeared to be headed for an easy triumph in the early stages. They made an 83-yard advance for their opening score, after the Yanks had held their first drive at the one-yard line. George Ratterman flipped to Mutryn for 25, to Alton Baldwin for 20, and to Marty Comer for the final eight. Steuber kicked the point.

Ratterman's 38-yard pitch to Vic Kulbitski set up the next touchdown, Mutryn cracking over from the one-yard line.

The big touchdown came in the final quarter after the Bills' Jim Wagner on the Bills' 23, and the Still booted out from his own 11 to the Yanks' 47. Sanders hit Yankee halfback evaded Alex Wizbicki and sped over the line. Johnson's conversion followed.

The game gave the Yankees a second place with the Bills in the eastern division, each club has a 2-4 record.

Bears Whip Rams, 42-21, For 3d Win

Chicago, Oct. 10 (AP).—Sid Luckman fired two scoring passes and Johnny Lujack pitched another to help give the unbeaten Chicago Bears their third straight National Football League triumph today with a 42-21 decision over the Los Angeles Rams.

The Bears thrilled 43,707 home fans in Wrigley Field by wrapping up the victory with a three-touchdown splurge in the second period to lead 21-0 at halftime. George McAffee ran back a punt 60 yards for the initial Chicago marker and Johnny Lujack kicked the first of his six extra points.

Four minutes later, Luckman tossed nine yards to J. R. Boone for the second tally to cap a 48-yard march. Shortly before halftime, Luckman hit Boone with an 11-yard scoring pitch in a 40-yard drive touched off by a recovered Ram fumble.

The Bears amassed a 28-0 margin at the outset of the third quarter as Bulldog Turner started a 31-yard scoring push by filching Bob Waterfield's pass. Lujack completed two tosses, to George Gulyanics and McAfee for 20 yards. Gulyanics finally squirmed over from the 1-foot line.

The Rams shaved the lead to 28-7 as Waterfield hit Frank Hubbell for 48 yards and eventually tossed eight to Jack Zilly for the counter.

The Bears followed this up with Ken Kavanaugh recovering Mullins' bobble which went across the goal line for another Chicago score.

Before the third quarter closed, the Rams scored their second touchdown to make the tally 35-14, while both clubs scored a touchdown apiece in the finale.

Browns Beat Dodgers for Sixth in Row

Cleveland, Oct. 10 (AP).—The Cleveland Browns, champions of the All-America Football Conference, won their sixth straight game tonight before a crowd of 31,187, as they finished fast for a 30-17 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers who dropped their sixth in a row.

The Dodgers played the Browns to a standstill through the first three periods, being tied 10-10 at the half and 17-17 going into the final session.

A recovered fumble and a touchdown run of 12 yards by End George Young in the first two minutes of the last quarter was the deciding blow. Although it was getting late, the Browns moved 73 yards in 17 plays, all on the ground, for another score, big Marion Motley going over from the three.

Baltimore Girl Wins Pin Test

Audrey Atkinson of Baltimore, a comparative unknown in the star-studded field, leveled 907 duckpins in seven games to win the twenty-first Annual Meyer Davis Women's Open last night at the Lucky Strike Alleys.

Ten-time winner Lorraine Gulli, of Washington, finished second with 850. Far down and out of the money was the defending champion, Elizabeth Barger with 812.

Two Games Highlight Week's Card

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

The high and prep schools begin a busy week of football today with a pair of important Interhigh League clashes highlighting a six-game program.

Western and Central, the only two league elevens with perfect records, risk their joint hold on first place against Eastern and Coolidge at 3:30 p. m.

Western's hold is a little more in jeopardy with the improving Eastern team bidding for a tie for second place. The inexperienced Western team has been the surprise of the season by blossoming early.

Central is expecting little trouble from the cellar Coolidge team which hasn't won in its two starts. Jimmy Pantos, Central's flashy quarterback, will be kept under wraps unless he's desperately needed. He suffered a charley horse against Anacostia a week ago Friday.

The league passes the far turn Friday with McKinley Tech at Wilson, Central at Eastern and Anacostia and Roosevelt at Central Stadium. It's the fourth game of the seven-game league slate for most of the teams, and should give a clew as to who the two championship finalists will be.

All of today's games were originally planned for last Friday, but were pushed back by rain. The result is that Eastern, Central, St. Albans, Gonzaga, Anacostia, Devitt, Georgetown Prep and Falls Church face two games each within six days.

Outside of the Interhigh League, the important games find Gonzaga at Anacostia at 3:30 today, Washington-Lee of Arlington at Norview of Norfolk Friday night, St. John's at Western Friday afternoon and Gonzaga at Montgomery Blair Saturday afternoon.

Field Goal Beats Skins, 10-7

the end when Tony Compagno grabbed one of Baugh's desperation passes and went to the Redskin 17. After the final gun players were being called back to the field by officials, then waved into the dressing room.

It all resulted from Redskin owner George Preston Marshall running onto the field and directing the officials' attention to the fact that a penalty had been called on the final play.

This normally calls for another play to be run, but after the officials had called back the players they suddenly decided that Pittsburgh had the ball anyway, and there was no need for another play so everyone went home.

Compagno's interception also started the hosts to their first touchdown after the Skins had thundered 46 yards with the second-half kickoff. Big Tony went from his own 3 to the Steeler 25 before he was downed, and there was a lot of strange action during the 75-yard jaunt to pay dirt.

First there was Dan Sandifer's interception of a Clement pass, carried to the Steeler 25, but called back because the Redskins were offsides. Then Bob Cifers kicked to Nussbaumer, who was hit so hard he fumbled and saw the Steelers' Jack Wiley recover on the Redskin 20.

Pittsburgh barely made the yardage for a first down on Washington's 9, but a couple of plays later, Cifers took a reverse from Clement and went around the left side to the 'Skin 2. Clement went over center on his first try thereafter.

You had to see Washington's return drive for a 7-7 tie to appreciate it. Dick Todd, who was one of Baugh's best receivers all day, ran the kickoff from his 15 to the 35 and the 'Skins advance started with, of course, a penalty. It was for unsportsmanlike conduct.

Washington's initial first down came on a roughing penalty and its second on Baugh's 13-yard flip to Crisley. Ed Quirk went through guard for 14 yards, but there the 'Skins did something else unsportsmanlike.

Baugh passed to Nussbaumer twice for 14 yards each time, but it was excessive roughness against the Redskins, Sandifer romped 7 yards to the Steelers 25 and a Steeler offside penalty earned a first down on the 20.

Dick Poillon blasted into the center for a single yard before Baugh and Crisler got together for 6 points. The big yearling from San Jose State was on the dead run in the far right corner when he took the rifle shot on his chest. A little over four minutes of the final period was gone when Poillon kicked the point that almost earned a tie.

With more luck—plus a few miracles — Pittsburgh might have held a 15-0 lead at the half. As it was, the Steelers were just as scoreless as the Redskins. They made all sorts of stabs at scoring, while Washington's nearest approach to cracking the scoring column, was a strictly ground onslaught that reached the Steeler 34 in the second period.

A Pittsburgh touchdown was voided, too, toward the end of the second quarter. On that disappointment for the Pittsburgh forces Clement broke off left tackle and went 42 yards into the end zone but on the play End Elbie Nickel was a good six yards offsides It was called back and three plays later Sandifer removed the threat from the Redskins by intercepting Clement's pass and racing 51 yards to the Steeler 41.

Steelers Threaten Again

Washington's longest advances besides the drive that reached the Steeler 34 with Todd and Castiglia doing the running got no further than the 45-yard-line once and the 47-yard-line on another occasion.

Meanwhile the Steelers made a pair of dangerous gestures in the direction of the 'Skins goal. Compagno's interception of Baugh's third pass of the day put the ball on the Redskin 25 after a 17-yard runback, and two plays later the Steelers were only 18 yards away. There Glamp's first field goal attempt was badly scuffed.

Later in the first period Baugh was hit hard on his own 25 as he attempted to pass, the ball bounced into Nickel's hands, and in short order Pittsburgh was just eight yards away from a score with the aid of a fancy fumble play involving the Steelers' Clement and Seabright.

A bad pass from center, costing 23 yards, saved the day for Washington at that point.

Tawney Star As Merchants Win, 6 to 0

Ed Tawney set the pace yesterday as Southwest Merchants turned back Arrow Linen in the feature Metropolitan Amateur Football League 160-pound game at Gonzaga, 6-0.

Southwest clinched the game in the first period when Tawney ran 35 yards to Arrow's 30. John (Boots) Mason passed 10 yards to Franny Ellis and a pass, Tawney to Ellis, brought the score.

Anacostia Eagles won their third straight in unlimited competition when they whipped Silver Spring A. C., at Gonzaga, 18-0. Stash Zelenski, Frank Geracci and Frank Burback scored in the second, third and final periods for the Eagles.

In the other unlimited contest Alperstein's Department Stores upset Falls Church Garage in the final minute of action at Mount Rainier High School, 7-0. Jack Magruder tossed 20 yards to Alex Sargis, who sprinted 20 more to the goal and Magruder rushed over the extra point.

Quarterback "Bumps" Vaughan staged an aerial circus by completing 15 passes in as many attempts as Maryland Mohawks came from behind in the final minutes to overcome a 6-0 deficit and edge the Anacostia Lions at Fletcher Field, 7-6.

Vaughan tossed 32 yards to Joe Heid, receiver of 13 of his passes, to Anacostia's 5, and Heid fought off two tacklers to score. Vaughan then pitched a strike to Buddy Donovan for the extra point.

Northeast Body Works beat Riverside Rollers in the remaining 160-pound game at Fairlawn, 7-0.

Phil Cocimano intercepted a pass on the 50 and ran back to Riverside's 10 in the last period. Jim Sterling plunged through to the 1, and Adrian Kidwell carried over. Don added the point from placement.

3-Day Contest Ends

Marines Make Clean Sweep In Title Pistol Shoot Here

Dead-eyed Marines from the Headquarters Battalion here and the Marine Corps Schools at Quantico, Va., swept the D. C. Pistol and Revolver Championships as the three-day competition ended here yesterday.

The Marines took all the matches, both individual and team, with the exception of the women's contests, in which no Marines were entered.

The contest, sponsored by the Twelfth Precinct (Police) Pistol Club, was concluded on the White House Police range at the National Arboretum. It was the first one held there registered with the National Rifle Association, thus permitting civilian entrants as well as police and military contestants.

Individual champion for the three-day contest was Capt. T. E. Barrier of Headquarters Battalion, with a high score of 1716 aggregate points out of possible 1800 in the .45, .38 and .22 caliber master class matches.

On the way to banging out his top aggregate score for the tthree calibers, Captain Barrier won yesterday's .22-caliber matches with 584 points in a possible 600. He is coach of the Headquarters Battalion team.

Quantico Marine Corps Schools Team No. 1 took top honors in the team competition, winning the Burnstine Trophy for the highest grand aggregate score in the three calibers.

The winning team, captained by Col. W. F. Prickett, of Quantico, included Maj. F. B. Nihart, M/Sergt. T. R. Mitchell, Warrant Officer M. S. Billing, who won the 45-caliber individual matches, Capt. John Mesko, S/Sergt. Joseph A. Jagiello and Lieut. John M. Jagoda.

Second place in the team competition was taken by the Marines' Headquarters Battalion unit, captained by Lieut. Col. Walter R. Walsh, individual winner in the .38-caliber matches. Placing third was the Marine Schools' No. 2 team. As hosts, local police units did not compete in the team contests.

Colonel Walsh also rated a second place in the individual competition for all three calibers, trailing Captain Barrier by 10 points. Third was M/Sergt. Mitchell.

Winner of the feminine sharpshooters was Miss Maria Hulseman, former Wac from Baltimore, who shot a 1049 score out of 1200 possible points. Placing second and third were Mrs. Margery Brown, 326 H st. ne., and Miss Helen Weaver, 5012 Kansas ave. nw., a Naval Ordnance Wave.

At 1 p. m. today, four-man teams from precincts and bureaus of the Metropolitan Police Department will compete in the annual intracity police matches, firing .38-caliber revolvers at the White House Police range.

Royals Down St. Paul, 8-3

Montreal, Oct 10 (AP).—The Montreal Royals trounced the St. Paul Saints 8-3 today to take a commanding 3-1 game lead in the Little World Series. The fifth game of the best-of-seven series will be played here tomorrow afternoon.

A crowd of 18,515 partisan Royal fans saw the Royals crash out nine hits from the offerings of five Saint pitchers, including a two-run homer by Third Baseman Oscar Grimes.

But Don Newcombe was the big story in the early innings. The fire-balling ace of the Montreal staff held the Saints hitless until two were out in the seventh inning—and by that time the Royals had an 8-0 advantage.

Sugar Radio Booters Win

Sugar Radio staved off a fast-playing Osia team at Rosedale yesterday to win, 5-3, as the Washington Suburban Soccer League opened its season.

In other matches, Glasva upset Marlboro, 2-1, at Marlboro; Martin's Bakery won over Rockville, 3-1, at Rockville; Charles County defeated Indian Head, 6-0, at Waldorf, and the Maryland Sports Club turned back Pan American, 2-1, at 16th and Kennedy sts. nw.

Vermillion, Simons, McBain and Gunn were the stars for Sugar Radio in its win over Osia. Herberts and Kickey did the scoring for Glasva as it downed Marlboro while Hunt, Seinuta and Cleveland led Martin's Bakery over Rockville.

Bobby Gray booted all of Charles County's goals as Indian Head was blanked.

Win Over VPI Puts Maryland on Top of Southern Conference

Upset Is Result

GW Didn't Want to Make Coach a Liar

THERE WAS JOY at George Washington, the usual "fear" at Maryland, and gloom—deep gloom at that—at Annapolis last night as coaches at three of the area's major schools discussed the accomplishments of their respective football teams.

George Washington whipped Virginia because it didn't want to make a liar out of its coach, Bo Rowland.

"I told 'em they could beat Virginia, and rather than make a liar out of me they went out and did it," said the jubilant little Rowland last night.

The Colonials' 20-12 triumph over a Virginia team favored by as many as 28 points was the first time in 51 years that GW had scored over the Cavaliers.

ROWLAND HAD PRAISE for everybody. "That squad of ours has more courage and determination than any I've ever coached," he continued.

"It took a lot of guts for them to come back after being trounced by VMI (26-6) to lick Virginia, but, brother, how those kids came back! They played smart football and whenever we got in a hole Bill Spangler kicked us out of it.

"And Andy Davis! What a competitor. He's not the most colorful or the flashiest player you'll see, but he's the steadiest . . . nothing rattles him . . ."

And how does GW's little football Napoleon feel about Friday's Griffith Stadium tussle with Kansas?

"Can't we talk about that Virginia game a little more?" he asked.

OUT AT COLLEGE PARK, Coach Split T-Tatum and staff last night started preparations for unbeaten, untied Maryland's first big test—against unbeaten, twice-tied Duke at Griffith Stadium Saturday.

That his Terps rolled to their third straight triumph (28-0) over VPI Saturday and still hadn't yielded a point didn't seem to impress Tatum too much.

"We were flat for VPI," he said, with an obvious disregard for the statistics which showed the Terrapins rolling up over 400 yards for the third straight week.

"Our boys have a man-sized job cut out for them against Duke Saturday. One mistake and we're licked."

Tatum started out by saying he feared Duke, which he has a perfect right to do after Duke's convincing 28-7 defeat of Navy, but he got downright optimistic, for him, before he was through.

"WE HAVE A BETTER ball club than the one which lost to Duke (19-7) last year. So does Duke. It wouldn't surprise me if we beat them, but it wouldn't surprise me if they beat us, either."

Navy Coach George Sauer wouldn't have been the life of anybody's party last night.

"We just can't seem to get over the hump," said the man who, week by week is finding his first year as coach of the Sailors anything but smooth sailing.

"We played well, for about two minutes, and then we started making mistakes. And when we make 'em they're beauts—touchdowns for the other team."

With a perfect record—three defeats in three outings—so far, Navy is over the "breather" stage of its schedule. It starts the suicide part Saturday in Baltimore against Missouri, which must have been mighty impressive in knocking off S. M. U. Saturday.

Sauer admitted his team was down, "but what can you expect out of boys who get whipped Saturday after Saturday. We'll make some more personnel changes this week. I'll say this, we may lose to Missouri, but they'll know they've been in a ball game."

Potomac Wins County Title

Potomac won the Montgomery County League baseball championship yesterday by blanking Colesville, 4 to 0, at Colesville in the final play-off game.

Lefty Johnny Clements turned in a one-hit performance for the winners while Shortstop Gene Taylor starred at bat with a single and double. Brother Love was the Colesville hurler.

The lone bingle off Clements' slant was delivered by Mike Godfrey, Colesville outfielder, who singled in the eighth inning.

Three Teams Trail Terps In Standings

Richmond, Va., Oct. 10 (AP).—The anual preliminary chores of separating the football men from the youngsters appeared just about completed today in the Southern Conferenee.

Three of the league's 16 teams remained with perfect records. The undefeated and untied group included Maryland's Terps, North Carolina's Tar Heels and Clemson's Tigers.

Coach Jim Tatum's Terps really were talking. In addition to being unbeaten and untied, the Terps hadn't had their goal line crossed after three performances.

Maryland's latest victim, Virgina Tech's Gobblers, went down Saturday to a 28-0 licking.

North Carolina, second only to Notre Dame in the national rankings last week, ran over Wake Forest's Deacons Saturday, 28-6.

Maryland's victory over the Gobblers, coupled with Wake Forest's defeat by the Tar Heels, knocked the Deacons from the Southern Conference leadership and elevated the Terps into the top slot.

Two Victories for Terps

Maryland had two league victories. Behind the Terps with one each were North Carolina, Clemson and the South Carolina Gamecocks.

Clemson stepped out of the Conference for its third triumph—a surprising 21-7 decision over Mississippi State.

Duke's Blue Devils, who walloped Navy, 28-7, Saturday, were still unbeaten but had two ties to mar their record.

Things are certain to happen this week as Duke faces Maryland at Washington, D. C., Saturday afternoon in the No. 1 loop battle. North Carolina plays host at Chapel Hill, N. C., to North Carolina State's Wolfpack, victor Saturday night by 40-0 over Davidson.

William and Mary's Indians, who knocked Virginia Military Institute out of the ranks of the undefeated Saturday by 31-0, travel to Virgina Tech.

VMI Vs. Richmond

A Saturday night game in the conference will send VMI's smarting Keydets to the University of Richmond. Richmond went all out last Friday night to win one for the Spider coach, Karl A. (Dick) Esleeck, hospitalized by an appendix operation. The Spiders won over Furman, 7-0, thanks to a 32-yard pass in the final 40 seconds.

George Washington's Colonials, who surprised Virginia, 20-12, Saturday, will play an intersectional contest Friday night at Washington against Kansas. Other weekend tilts saw Tulane blank South Carolina, 14-0; the Citadel trip Newberry, 14-0; Georgia Tech rout Washington and Lee, 27-0.

Langdon Lions Win 4th Straight, 39-0

Langdon's Lions won their fourth straight game yesterday in the 140-pound division against the visiting Keno A. C., 39-0.

Area Golfing Roundup

Jankowski Wins Club Title, 4-3

Mike Jankowski moved to the fore in Prince Georges Country Club golfing circles with a bang yesterday.

It was hie explosive drives that brought him the club championship in his first title competition as a Prince Georges member. Doug Mattison was the 4-and-3 victim of Jankowski's power game in the 36-hole final.

Jankowski, brother of Central football coach John Jankowski, was 6 up at 18 holes, playing a par 72 to Mattison's 78. When they closed out on the thirty-third, Jankowski had slid only one stroke behind par. Mattison was seven over for the match.

BETHESDA—Serge Folke went into the final round for the club championship by defeating Cal Reeder yesterday, 3 and 2. Folke will meet J. E. Williams in an 18-hole finals match on Tuesday . . . Gene Arnold won the second flight championship, beating Tom Baldwin, 2 up. Through mutual consent of both finalists, the third flight finals match was spread out to 36 holes. R. S. Goodrich made it much shorter, however, by defeating J. C. Watson, 11 and 9.

WOODMONT—Howard Nordlinger was low man yesterday in the qualifying round of a Calcutta pool, posting a 76. Lester Rosenberg had a 79—10—69, and was tied by Jack Blau with 81—12—69 in the low net play. . . . The annual senior championship, sponsored by the District Golf Association, to be held tomorrow, has drawn 24 entries. Pairings and starting times:

12 noon—Dr. Thomas Foley, Chevy Chase; Capt. Dwight Dickinson, Chevy Chase; Capt. I. Bogart, Chevy Chase. 12:10—A. J. Montgomery, Washington; H. A. Mihilla, Congressional; J. B. Murphy, Belle Haven. 12:30—Walter Tuckerman, Burning Tree; D. L. McGrew, Chevy Chase; W. C. Brantley, Chevy Chase. 12:30—Ian Mills, Indian Spring; Frank Butler, Indian Spring; Louis Davis, Indian Spring. 12:40—Harry Lawson, Washington; C. C. Heath, Belle Haven; Calvin O. Black, Belle Haven. 12:50—Charles C. Windsor, Army-Navy; John Childress, Chevy Chase; Ned Burnham, Burning Tree. 1:00—James Cochran, Burning Tree; Leslie Whitten, Burning Tree; Don S. Brooks, Burning Tree. 1:10—Don Childress, Chevy Chase; C. N. Goodwin, Congressional; Joseph Friedman, Woodmont.

WHITE FLINT—Martin F. Carpenter hit a hole-in-one with his three wood here yesterday on the 154-yard seventh hole. Playing with him were Mr. and Mrs. I. G. McCann and Capt. D. Gibson.

KENWOOD—A. A. Jostes, 88-83-23—141, and William Briggs, 78-71-8—141, tied for first place in the Earl Hodges Trophy tournament, completed yesterday. Chester Hennigan was second with 82-82-22—142. Arrangements for deciding the first-place tie have not yet been completed. . . . The end-of-season Field Day will be held this Thursday.

WASHINGTON — One of the last District Golf Association tournaments of the waning season will be the Fall Handicap Mixed Scotch Foursome, due here October 19. Entry fees are $3.00 per team and entries close on October 17.

The Federal Golf Association brings down the curtain on its 1948 season with the Annual Field Day next Saturday.

Golfing activities will be held at the East Potomac course and will include a sweepstakes, a blind bogey, and a mixed two-ball foursome.

In the evening the scene will shift to Benny Bortnick's Village Inn where dinner will be served in between presentation of prizes, bull sessions and golf movies.

The Maryland State Golf Association season finale will be a mixed two-ball at the Elkridge Club, Charles Street, Baltimore. Handicaps will be allowed, selected drives and alternate shots will be the rule. Entries should be addressed to Emmet Gary, 16 McClellan Place, Baltimore, 1, Maryland.

Congressional Out Of Md. Team Play

Baltimore, Oct. 10 (AP). — The Country Club of Maryland golf team moved a step nearer to a successful defense of its State championship against the Suburban Club today, winning 10½ to 7½.

Rolling Road, meanwhile, topped the Congressional Country Club team from Washington, 11½ to 6½. The two winners will meet on a neutral course next Sunday.

Double Wrestling Feature at Uline

A double-header feature is scheduled for the second weekly wrestling show at Uline Arena tonight at 8:30 o'clock.

In the one-fall finish main event Rudy Dusek will meet big Jim Wallis. In the other top event, a special Australian tag team match involving two-of-three falls and a one-hour time limit will pair off Steve Gob and Tony Martinelli against Reb Russell and Tarzan Hewitt.

The Red Terror, new 260-pound masked marvel, bows in against Red Kirkpatrick in a special 30-minute time limit affair, while an opening bout matches Paddy Mack and Rocco Columbo.

Oakland Wins In Cup Play-off

Oakland, Calif., Oct. 10 (AP).—The Oakland Oaks, champions of the Pacific Coast League, defeated Seattle twice today to win the Governor's Cup playoff and a $30,000 pot. Oakland won the opener 11-1, and the second game 4-1.

Blue Ridge Wins 2 Titles

By Harry De Mawby, Jr.

Blue Ridge, handsome grey 4-year-old gelding, owned and ridden by Hugh Wiley, from Towson, Md., accounted for the two top hunter awards at the completion of the quality-packed Columbus horse show in Silver Spring yesterday, taking the conformation and working hunter championships.

Blue Ridge also accumulated enough points to earn the Bobby Roby Perpetual Memorial Trophy, the most sought after trophy of the metropolitan area.

Runner-up in the conformation division was Barbar Joe Shipley's good chestnut gelding Flint, well handled by Picken Hamilton of Warrenton, Va. The working hunter, Post Meridian, owned by George Di Paula of Baltimore, Md., was expertly ridden to reserve position in the working hunter division by Eilleen Smith.

Tandberg Stops Mazzali

Gothenburg, Sweden, Oct. 10 (AP). Olle Tandberg, Swedish heavyweight, stopped Mentore Mazzali, of Italy, in the sixth round of a scheduled 10-round fight tonight. Each weighed 205.

30-DAY SMOKING TEST PROVES CAMEL MILDNESS!

For 30 consecutive days in a recent test, hundreds of men and women all across the country smoked Camels—and only Camels—on the average of one to two packages a day.

Every week, their throats were carefully examined by noted throat specialists — a total of 2470 examinations from coast to coast.

And these famous throat specialists reported that they found not one single case of throat irritation due to smoking Camels!

America Must Have Better Tools

This is the 69th of a series.

In the past twenty years the United States has failed to provide its workers with enough new tools and equipment.

To most Americans this statement will come as a shock—or will be doubted. We are quite complacent about our industrial equipment, for easily understood reasons.

Throughout the '30s we heard continuously the propaganda line that the United States had become a "mature economy." The job of equipping America with industrial plants and tools was said to be largely done.

Now, knowing that industry is spending billions to expand and rebuild its plants, many people assume that the result must be a first-class industrial system.

A further powerful inducement to complacency is the vastly worse industrial condition of most of the rest of the world. When Americans look abroad in almost any direction they see shattered plants and equipment. A natural reaction is that we are sitting pretty.

That is a dangerous reaction. Between depression and war, we have failed to build the tools and equipment we need. This condition is dangerous for three reasons:

1. From bitter experience we know that national security depends first and foremost on the capacity and readiness of our industrial equipment.

All of our plans for stabilizing prosperity assume a world at peace. The greatest menace to peace would be an unarmed America, unable or unwilling to keep herself strong and ready for defense—strong in spirit, in resources and in the all-important industrial plant and equipment.

2. Whether Americans live well—or badly—depends directly on the kind and quality of tools used by American workmen.

This is true for all workers, and for every worker—from a garage mechanic and his wrenches to a steel mill gang and its rolling equipment. In a monumental study of "America's Needs and Resources" the Twentieth Century Fund found this fact: The improvement in the real income of the American people has more consistently followed the amount of power used in industry than anything else. What the workman worked with determined, more than any other factor, the size of his pay envelope, and what it would buy.

3. Our success in stabilizing prosperity will depend largely on what we do about building new tools and equipment.

About 30% of our industrial workers are employed in producing tools and equipment. Steady employment for them is essential to our over-all prosperity.

How far have we fallen behind in providing new plants and equipment?

Estimates vary. Here is one rough estimate: If we had built new industrial facilities during 1930-48 at the rate we did in the prosperous '20s, we would have spent at least $100 billion more than actually we did.

To get a better and more complete measure of this deficit, McGraw-Hill is undertaking a survey of American Business' Needs for New Plant and Equipment.

Businessmen all over the nation are being asked to answer questions like this: How much money would you need to put your plant in first class condition? How much are you planning to spend for new plant and equipment? Where do you expect to raise the money? The results will be reported later in this editorial series. Already the survey shows we have fallen many billions of dollars behind.

Some shortcomings are apparent to everyone. They are revealed in a lot of rickety transportation facilities and in run-down buildings.

Many other deficiencies do not come into general view. They are, for example, the antiquated machines in our plants. Of the privately-owned machine tools in use in 1945—when the last census of metalworking equipment was made by AMERICAN MACHINIST—54% were more than 10 years old. Their average age is higher today.

It is true that in recent years we have hit new highs in total national production. But we have done so by putting far more people to work than ever worked before . . . and by driving equipment to the limit of its waning endurance, sometimes beyond. It has not been done primarily in what is by all odds the best way to increase production—to use more and better and more modern tools and equipment.

Haven't we overcome much of this twenty-year deficit by rushing to build new plants since the end of the war?

No. For two clear-cut reasons:

1. The accumulated shortage is tremendous. The total of about $40 billion, which has been spent for industrial plant and equipment since VJ-Day, has not wiped it out.

2. Some key industries have had difficulty in getting the facilities they need. Take steel, for example—the industry that turns out our most basic industrial material. Its needs for new equipment are measured in billions of dollars. To pay for that equipment, it should have risk capital—money which people are willing to invest with a risk of losing for the sake of gain. For steel is an up-and-down industry. Earnings on its common stocks inevitably share both ways in those ups-and-downs.

Since the war, steel, in common with most of industry, has been unable to market new common stock successfully. Its outstanding stock is now selling for only about one-half the current net worth of the industry's present assets. With investors willing to pay only 50 cents on the dollar for its facilities, the industry can not readily sell stock to pay for new plant and equipment—at higher prices even than the old.

Why can't steel—and other industries—attract people who are willing to risk their money retooling America?

The full answer to that serious question must be left to future editorials in this series, for it involves many things . . . tax reform . . . mobilization of small savings . . . a new respect for corporate profits.

This first editorial seeks simply to emphasize two fundamentals:

First, our standard of living improves with the quality of our industrial equipment.

Second, American industry and American workmen badly need billions of dollars worth of better equipment now.

The American people must understand that not only our continued prosperity but also our security as a nation depends upon giving American industry more and better equipment.

"Give us the tools." This was Winston Churchill's cry for help to win the war. Only if we give American industry new and better tools will we have a chance to win abiding prosperity at home and good order abroad.

James H. McGraw, Jr.

President, McGraw-Hill Publishing Company, Inc.

★ THIS EDITORIAL, and a series to follow, will be devoted to a single problem—how to provide American industry with the equipment needed to improve that envy of the world, the American standard of living. No more important problem confronts us today. Upon our wisdom in handling it depends not only the degree of our prosperity, but also our security as a nation.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

VA May Increase Staff by 8000 in Insurance Payoff

VA: It now estimated that 8000 additional employes will be needed for a year to pay a dividend on its huge insurance fund. A recent survey of the work involved indicated that it would require more people than expected.

About 16 million service people will get dividends that range from a few dollars to a couple of hundred dollars from the two-billion-dollar melon that's to be cut. And you can ignore reports that the dividends will be paid right before election. They won't even begin to go out for at least eight months.

STORY: Robert Patterson, the former War Secretary, is a high-priced New York corporation lawyer. Several weeks ago a friend told him of hearsay and minor evidence that was being used against a Federal worker accused of disloyalty. Patterson didn't know the employe, but he became so provoked that he volunteered, and is now the lawyer for the accused worker. A former distinguished Federal judge, Patterson has an intimate knowledge of both the law and civil rights. The best thing that could happen to the loyalty program would be to get more Pattersons interested in it.

AFGE: A fight is brewing in the AFL's American Federation of Government Employes over the vacant vice presidency. A Washington member must be elected. It was first believed that Trail Price of the Bureau of Employment Compensation, would not have opposition. Now, however, Harry Keller of the Adjutant General's Office, has entered the race.

HANDICAPPED: The Naval Gun Factory here has surely set some sort of a record by the employment of more than 500 people who are physically handicapped—most of them veterans. In Navy's Bureau of Ordnance, of which the gun factory is a part, are more than 2500 disabled veterans.

Two outstanding cases here are those of John Keehan and John Mellender. Keehan, a gun factory machinist before the war, was so critically injured in the Battle of the Bulge that he was in an Army hospital for two years before he was discharged as 100 per cent disabled. He's now doing a fine job of keeping records in the fire control shop at the gun factory.

Mellender, who served in the Marines, has a partly paralyzed left arm as a result of a battle injury. But he's now back at his old job as a gun factory machinist.

STORY: Eliahu Epstein, Israel's diplomatic representative here, was riding in a cab when the driver began a slam-bang political talk. Suspicious because the diplomat remained quiet, the driver demanded to know where he was from. To which Epstein replied vaguely:

"Why, I'm from the Middle East."

"The Middle East," the driver repeated in surprise, "now I've heard of the Middle West, but the Middle East—never,"

NOTES: The furnace is broken at GAO's offices at 119 D st. ne., and the employes there haven't had any heat this year. Several have developed colds. . . . The National Customs Service Association has lost its able and effective president by the death of Harry F. Worley of this city. . . . Problems in mobilization planning will be discussed at a dinner meeting Wednesday night in the YWCA of the American Society for Public Administration.

NLRB: Perhaps no Federal agency has had such a rough time of it over the past 10 years than the National Labor Relations Board. It has been the victim of various congressional inquiries; there have been many lay-offs and reorganizations, and the agency and its employes have been accused of everything in the book.

But the other day someone checked up and discovered that 161 NLRB employes had served the agency a minimum of 10 years—roughly a fifth of its former strength. So the 10-year veterans—the hardy souls—are going to be given a picnic, and every year the affair will be held to welcome a new group into the select 10-year circle.

ANTI-TRUST: Manuel M. Gorman is the new chief of the cartel and patent section and Marcus Hollabaugh is the assistant chief . . . FARMS: There is no indication of any imminent action on these two problems that worry Government girls who live at Arlington Farms: (1) that their rent will be raised, and (2) that the dormitories will be closed. A recommendation that the rents be boosted was made three months ago, and nothing has been heard about it since.

CIVIL SERVICE: It's new commissioner, James M. Mitchell, will take office the latter part of this week. Don't expect him to push any pet ideas or to try to reform the commission and all its works. Anything along that line, of course, must wait for the outcome of the election.

Some people seem to think that the three Civil Service commissioners will all be out automatically in January if Dewey is elected. They do serve at the pleasure of the President and their terms can be ended by him at any time. However, it would take any President several months to get around to thinking about Civil Service appointments, let alone doing anything about them. It seems reasonable to suppose that Mitchell will serve a minimum of six or eight months.

Survey to Aid D. C. Downtown Parking

Study of Plans in Four Eastern Cities To Serve as Guide for District Planning

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

One of the District's top parking experts will leave on a one-week tour of four major Eastern cities this morning to study how they are attacking the downtown parking problem.

The expert, Charles T. McGavin, chief economic analyst on the Highways Department now assigned to the motor vehicle parking agency, will visit Baltimore, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Cleveland to study services, fees, methods and structures.

His findings will be incorporated in a major report requested by Congress in the last session on the comparative parking rates and services in Washington and other cities.

Study Already Begun

McGavin, who has been studying and attacking parking problems throughout the United States since 1926, has already begun his local study with issuance of a detailed questionnaire to parking lot and building operators.

In addition, he has made personal inspections of several of the facilities and invited the Keystone Auto Club and the American Automobile Association to submit specific complaints from their members on parking service here.

The four cities to be visited were selected because of proximity as well as the variety of their attacks on the problem.

The first stopping point will be Baltimore, a city considered about equal in population with Washington, which has its own municipal parking agency. It has been studying plans for erecting a large downtown parking garage.

The next city to be studied is Philadelphia, which has claimed publicly that the parking problem has been brought under control. One of the principal methods used has been the prohibition of all parking in the shopping areas.

Has Shuttle Bus System

The third point is Cleveland, which now has a fringe lot-shuttle bus system similar to Washington's, except that it is on a much larger scale, McGavin said.

The final stop will be in Pittsburgh, which has launched a municipal government undertaking in the parking field, beginning with the erection of parking garages and later to include the purchase of present privately operated lots.

The District's pioneer attempt at attacking the downtown parking problem through establishment of fringe lots and shuttle buses has been gaining patronage steadily. The first week, 1326 cars were handled at the Municipal Center and Cass-Heurich lots. The second week, it rose to 1476, and the past week moved to 1627—1360 at the Center lot and 267 at the other lot.

McGavin's interest in the parking problem goes back to his Stanford University days. After obtaining an engineering degree there, he spent two years studying parking problems. During this period, he followed closely the operations of San Francisco's parking ramp garage, then acclaimed one of the best parking solutions in the country.

Designed Handling Device

McGavin also designed a completely automatic auto parking handling device for use in parking structures and received a patent on it. High cost of construction has hindered its prodution thus far, McGavin said.

Later he moved to Detroit where he became assistant general superintendent of National Garages, which operated 13 skyscraper type parking buildings in Detroit, and others in nearby cities. The next stop was Los Angeles, where he managed a nine-story elevator parking garage.

This was followed by a study for a Los Angeles department store uncertain whether to give up its downtown location in the face of a difficult parking problem in favor of establishing branches in the suburbs. McGavin recommended enlarging a rear entrance area and providing parking space near the downtown store. This resulted in a sizable boost in patronage, he reported.

The next stop was Yale University where he was first a research assistant, then an instructor, in parking problems. It was then he began writing a book on city parking headaches and how to solve them, but World War II intervened, and he entered the Navy before it was finished.

After discharge, he came to Washington in January, 1946, and went to work with the Highways Department. He was then assigned to the Motor Vehicle Parking Agency to assist P. Y. K. Howat, director, and W. T. Vanaman, assistant director.

D. C. Lawyer Marks 50 Years Of Supreme Court Practice

Fifty years ago today, John Spalding Flannery, veteran Washington lawyer, was admitted to practice before the United States Supreme Court, and a month later argued his first case before that tribunal.

Flannery

But as for talking about his half century as a lawyer close to the Supreme Court, Flannery is more than reticent. The soft spoken conservatively dressed barrister would talk only of 'the record," which he conceded "might be interesting, perhaps, to young attorneys."

While discussing "the record," in an interview at his office in the Hibbs Building, Flannery brought out the file on that first case which he won some 50 years ago.

Opponent Died Last Week

The suit in question—involving the will of a prominent Washington woman—was forcibly recalled to Flannery's mind last week when he attended the funeral of Henry P. Blair, community leader and a legal opponent of Flannery's in the Supreme Court case of half a century ago.

Flannery, still actively practicing at 78, refers to his first suit with the glow of a warrior besting a worthy contender.

The contested will was that of Mrs. Mary Eleanor Ruth, mother of Dr. Melancthon Ruth, who had left some $30,000 in real estate and other property in trust for her granddaughter, Sophia Yuengling Huston.

An error in the wording of a codicil added to the will brought on a contest, after the death of the granddaughter, between the hospital of the University of Pennsylvania and the Home for Incurables in Fordham, N. Y.

The original will had bequested $5000 to the hospital—represented by Mr. Blair—while the Home, by whom Flannery was retained, would receive the rest of the legacy. However, the codicil gave to a friend of Mrs. Ruth "the $5000 heretofore in my will bequeathed to said Home for Incurables."

It took a four-year legal battle to straighten out the error, and in a decision handed down on January 3, 1899, Justice Edward Douglass White for the Court said Mrs. Ruth meant to take the $5000 from the hospital bequest and not from the legacy rightfully claimed by the Home for Incurables.

The veteran attorney, who lives at 2411 California st. nw., and is a member of the firm of McKenney, Flannery & Craighill, was admitted to the District Bar in 1895. He has been personal attorney for most of the Chief Justices of the past 50 years.

Youth Arrested For Falsifying Age to Get Beer

An 18-year-old youth was charged with misrepresenting his age to obtain beer yesterday after a Saturday night check of Prince Georges County taverns by county police.

The check was made by Probation and Parole Officer Roy Bright and County Policeman Emmett Gray.

The officers said the youth, Robert Lee Fleet, 1114 South Carolina ave. se., admitted using a borrowed driver's permit to establish his age as more than 21. His age is 18, the officers said. It was determined from his draft registration card.

The youth, arrested at Freddie's, a tavern at Riverdale, Md., posted $27.80 collateral for appearance October 18 in Hyattsville Police Court.

Montgomery ADA Rally To BackTruman, Austin

Americans for Democratic Action of Montgomery County will sponsor a rally in support of the candidacies of President Truman and Byrne Austin at 8 p. m. Wednesday in the National Guard Armory, Kensington, Md. Mr. Austin is Democratic congressional candidate in Maryland's Sixth District.

Speakers will include Wendell Berge, former Assistant Attorney General in charge of the antitrust division, now a resident of Rock Creek Mills, near Kensington; Austin; Chairman J. Bond Smith of the Democratic State Central Committee for the county, and Will Allen, ADA leader who opposed Austin in the Democratic primary.

Coal and Oil Supply Held Ample Here

Stores Greater With Indicated Supplies 8 to 9% Above Last Year

District fuel oil and coal distributors have a warm and cheering word for local householders who recall their fuel supply worries during last year's shortages.

Local oil dealers are generally confident that an indicated 8 to 9 per cent greater supply than last year's, and the larger amount of oil now stored by both dealers and home owners, will see householders through a season even as severe as the last.

While qualifying optimism to allow for any unusual military demands, a winter colder than last, or other emergencies, A. Graham Shields, managing director of the Oil Heat Institute of Greater Washington, declared yesterday:

"The outlook for the coming heating season indicates sufficient fuel oil for present installations and a reasonable number of new installations. The major suppliers to whom we look for information, represented by the American Petroleum Institute, advise us there will be 8 to 9 per cent more oil for delivery this winter.

Curb on Waste Urged

Shields emphasized that he would still urge householders not to waste their fuel, both from a short-term point of view, in case of unforeseen emergencies, and also in the interest of conserving the Nation's natural resources.

The fuel oil coordinating committee, reappointed for this winter by the District Commissioners in case of emergency, is "laying the groundwork" by checking local dealers' contracts to see how much of the liquid fuel will be available, according to J. Thomas Kennedy, chairman, who is also District superintendent of weights, measures and markets.

As other oil dealers also cited the better supply and storage situation, spokesmen for coal distributors expressed optimism as well.

Supply Looks Plentiful

"The local coal supply looks plentiful now," declared P. A. Deck, chairman of the Merchants and Manufacturers' coal division. "Most yards are full, and in general it's more plentiful than it's been for several years. Barring any shutdowns—which I don't anticipate—or a very long cold spell, things look good."

Individual dealers generally agreed, but expressed a hope that customers would not all order coal at the same time, as they usually do, resulting in delays in deliveries.

Young's Aides To Be Checked On Loyalty

Special Assistant Corporation Counsel Daniel B. Maher has begun a survey of the loyalty "sensitivity" of employes under the control of Commissioner John Russell Young, the Commissioner disclosed last night.

Both Commissioner Guy Mason and Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young have already submitted similar reports to the eight-man loyalty committee headed by Maher. The two reports were filed during June.

The Commissioners ordered the survey May 20 on the committee's recommendation after the Federal Government announced a similar check of its workers. Criteria for determing which posts were "sensitive" to the national security were drawn from a memorandum submitted to the committee by General Young.

Maher is also preparing regulations for a revision of the present Fire Department Trial Board. He is expected to recommend a three-man board consisting of top department officials to replace the present board which includes two department officers and a member of the corporation counsel's office.

Electric Service Interrupted as Auto Hits Pole

Electric service was interrupted to about 150 Arlington homes last night when an automobile struck a power pole at Wilson blvd. and N. 10th st.

A spokesman for Virginia Electric & Power Co. said service was off from about 8:30 to 9:45 p. m. in the Lyon Park area. Impact of the crash, the spokesman said, knocked two wires together near the Clarendon power substation.

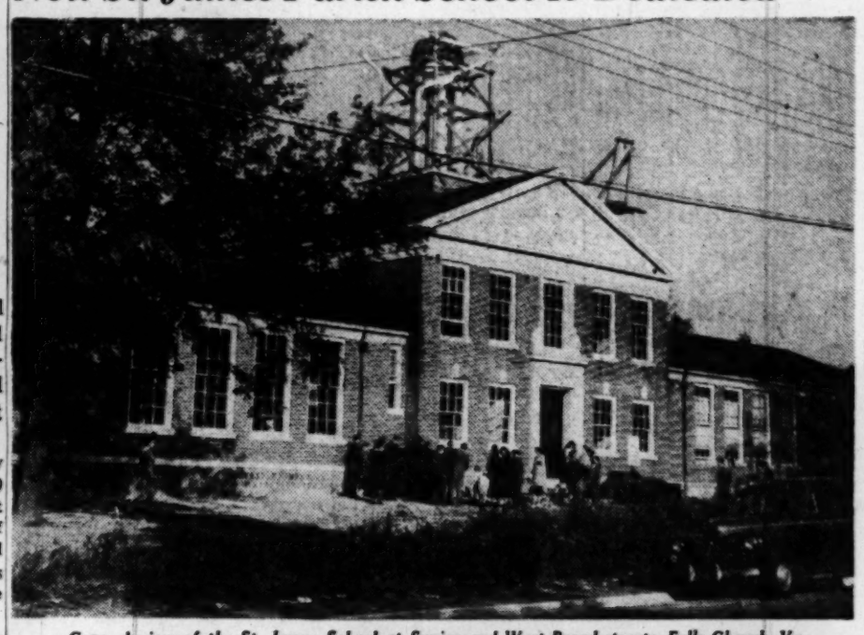
Taken to Arlington Hospital from the accident were Percy May, 47, of 5225 N. 26th st., Arlington, and Mrs. Edith May, 43, of the same address. May was released after treatment for minor injuries. Mrs. May was admitted for observation.

To Talk on Safety Plans

Robie Dunman, assistant director of the President's Highway Safety Conference, will be guest speaker at the Exchange Club's luncheon in the Burlington Hotel at 12:15 p. m. Tuesday.

Dunman will speak on the program of the Highway Safety Conference.

New St. James Parish School Is Dedicated



General view of the St. James School at Spring and West Broad streets, Falls Church, Va.

Bishop P. L. Ireton, Of Richmond Diocese, Officiates at Rites

The new $250,000 parochial school of St. James' Parish, Falls Church, Va., was dedicated yesterday afternoon by Bishop Peter L. Ireton of the Richmond (Va.) diocese.

Before several hundred parishioners, Bishop Ireton placed the first trowelful of mortar at the cornerstone and then officiated in formal religious dedication rites.

The school, which opened two weeks ago with an enrollment of more than 500, is at Spring and W. Broad st. It contains 10 classrooms, library, auditorium, medical and dental clinic, and a cafeteria.

Dedication address was given by the Right Rev. Msgr. Edward B. Jordan, vice rector of Catholic University.

Monsignor Jordan declared "it is only occasionally" that cooperation between church, state and the family exists in the education of the young.

"For the most part," he said, "we find the state usurping the rights of the family and the church and forcibly compelling parents to send their children to schools organized and taught in accordance with the ideas of the political faction in control."

After citing certain European school systems, he asserted that in the United States "attempts to coerce the consciences of the American people also have not been lacking."

Monsignor Jordan branded "astounding" the Supreme Court decision which "forbids even the use of a school building for religious instruction and thus completely secularizes American public education."

"The church looks upon education as a unitary process; she considers the task of education to be the formation of the whole child; she holds that no educative agency can be indifferent to any phase of the process.

"Any division of the work of education which permits either the home, the school, or the state to deal with the child as if he had no relation whatever to the God who made him is contrary to nature and to the positive laws of God," he said.

"Both the home and the church have a right to demand that the school shall not only not teach anything contrary to what they conscientiously and with sound reason maintain to be the truth; but also that it shall not by its neglect or its indifference engender disrespect or contempt for what they similarly hold to be sacred."

Catholic U. Alumni Set Reunion Here For First Time

The Alumni Association of Catholic University will hold its annual homecoming reunion in Washington, October 22 through the 24th.

John L. Schroeder, national secretary, announced that alumni from 30 States, Canada, Cuba and Puerto Rico will attend the reunion—first to be held here since the graduate body was formed.

The get-together will open with a forum at Statler Hotel on the subject: "The Report of the President's Commission on Higher Education." Later, there will be a homecoming dance, an "open house" on the campus and a banquet which Archbishop Patrick A. O'Boyle, University Chancellor, will attend as honor guest.

Takoma Park Hearing Set on Kindergarten

Formal application for a permit to operate a kindergarten at 8 Columbia ave., Takoma Park, Md., has been filed with the Montgomery County Commissioners by the J. Enos Ray School Parent-Teachers' Association. A public hearing has been set on the petition for October 19, at Rockville Courthouse.

The commissioners revoked a previous permit granted the kindergarten without a hearing after Mrs. Alma T. Opal, Takoma Park clubwoman told the commissioners she would take legal action if a hearing were not held as required by law before granting the permit.

Arlington Boy Loses 2 Races With Police

A 19-year-old speed demon with a fondness (police say) for vacuum cleaners ran two heats against a police scout car late Saturday night and lost both of them.

Because he lost, Donald C. Peacher, of 1914 Columbia pike, Arlington, found himself under arrest yesterday, charged with failing to exhibit a registration card, speeding 55 miles an hour and larceny of an automobile.

It all started at about 11:15 p. m. Saturday at Eastern ave. and Bladensburg rd. ne. Pvts. Mason T. Lewter and Edwin M. Bruce took after a 1946 Ford in their scout car when it whizzed past them.

Force Car to Curb

After a chase of about a mile and a half, they forced the car to the curb at Bladensburg rd. and New York ave. ne. However, when one of the officers stepped from the scout car, the driver of the auto started off again and the chase was renewed.

This time, police overhauled the speeding auto at 15th and H sts. ne. In the car with Peacher, the driver, were three other youths, police said.

At the Fourth Precinct stationhouse, one of Peacher's companions told police that Peacher had told him he had "borrowed" the 1946 Ford in which they were riding. Another companion volunteered the information that Peacher had recently sold him a used vacuum cleaner.

Police then recalled a lookout sent earlier in the week reporting the theft of another car, a 1941 Pontiac, from in front of the Hoover Vacuum Cleaner Co., 1305 Rhode Island ave. nw. The car belonged to E. B. Hall, a Hoover salesman.

They recalled, too, that the stolen car had contained five vacuum cleaners.

Police said after questioning, Peacher admitted stealing the car containing the vacuum cleaners. They said he then took them to Arlington where the second car was parked. In the back of the car, police said, were four of the vacuum cleaners.

Area Town Hall to Hear Cornelius Vanderbilt, jr.

The annual Town Hall Series, sponsored by Silver Spring Rotary Club, will open with a talk by Cornelius Vanderbilt, jr., traveler and journalist, at 8:15 p. m. Thursday in the Silver Spring Armory at Wayne ave. and Pershing dr.

Vanderbilt will speak on his recent 10-week trailer trip through Europe, which was his 124th visit abroad. The Town Hall series will benefit the Rotary Club's student loan fund.

Postlude

3d Mozart Set Shows Tragic Side

By Richard Keith

Although the crowd at the third concert of the current Mozart cycle being presented at the National Gallery was not as large as it has been on previous Sundays, there was still a large number of standing listeners.

If one were to describe the spirit of Mozart's music on the basis of the music heard on the first two concerts of this series, one would almost have to say that it is cheerful and bouncing. Include the two quartets played last night, and one must then say that it has a passionately sorrowful aspect, far more profound than most composers' most serious music.

The great D minor Quartet, played superbly last night by the Tomasow quartet, is equaled only by the G minor Quartet and the G minor Symphony in its tragic breadth. The warm, intense tones of this excellent chamber group were perfectly suited to the task of sustaining this feeling from beginning to end. They succeeded equally well in projecting the spacious lines of the C major Quartet with its famous dissonant introduction.

To anyone who has listened impatiently to examples of the interminable duets for solo instruments so popular in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, the one for violin and viola, played last night, must have been a pleasant surprise. It showed again how Mozart could take an old, worn-out form and fill it with lively material.

The authenticity of last night's performance would have been greatly helped if cadenzas had been supplied at the obvious places. Jan Tomasow and Norman Lamb played excellently.

Half-and-Half Program

Yesterday afternoon at Phillips Gallery, Eileen Flissler, young pianist, played a program of music, half old and half new. The old half included the massive, one might say monstrous, transcription by Busoni of the Bach Chaconne, the Beethoven Les Adieux Sonata, and the Chopin G minor Ballade.

A set of Shostakovich-inspired novelty pieces by Harold Gilmore, together with familiar pieces by Bartok, Poulenc, and Ravel made up the new half. Miss Flissler's playing exhibited an admirable mixture of clear brilliance and expressiveness. Although this latter quality seemed at times to be overdone, it showed that she had studied the music intently and intelligently.

Police Raid Mixed Dance Of Wallace Supporters

Seven Men Face Charges of Selling Whisky Illegally, Operating Lottery

A police raiding party of 35 men broke up a dance sponsored by supporters of Henry Wallace early yesterday and arrested seven men, either for illegal sale of whisky or operating a lottery.

The dance, sponsored by the United Negro Allied Veterans of America, a pro-Wallace group, was at Laborers' Hall, 525 New Jersey ave. nw.

When the police party, led by Capt. Howard V. Covell of the First Precinct, entered the hall the orchestra quickly struck up the National Anthem, a strategem that briefly halted the officers in their tracks.

But when the last strains of "The Star-Spangled Banner" had faded, police went to work.

Dance Attended by 350

Police said about 350 persons were at the dance, half of them white, half of them Negro.

Arrested were Winston Carl Edwards, 30, of 2914 Sherman ave. nw.; Sidney Goldreich, 25, of 3812 Florence dr., Alexandria; Walter Ernest White, 23, of 1313 49th st. ne.; Shirley Windfield, 23, of 2327 Virginia ave. nw.; Edmund Stephan Majchrzyk, 24, of 516 2d st. nw.; Bernard C. Campbell, 29, of 1007 15th st. se., and Frank E. Trusclair, 27, 2911 Sherman ave. nw.

Police identified Edwards as national chairman of the United Negro Allied Veterans of America and Goldreich as acting chairman of the Veterans for Wallace organization.

Each was charged with keeping and selling whisky without a license and operating a lottery and released in $2000 bond. They will be arraigned today before United States Commissioner Cyril Lawrence.

Names of All Taken

White, Windfield and Campbell were charged with illegal possession and sale of whisky and freed in $1500 bond each. Bond for Majchrzyk and Trusclair who were charged with operating a lottery was $500 each.

Police took down the names of everyone present. About a dozen persons at the dance refused to divulge their names, so they were loaded into patrol wagons and taken to police headquarters.

At headquarters, they finally revealed their names, were booked for investigation and released. Several of this group told reporters they were members of Henry Wallace' Progressive Party.

Captain Covell said afterwards that he wanted it made clear that politics had nothing to do with the raid, that it was made because information was received that whisky was being sold illegally at the dance.

"We raided the Gold Key Club and other clubs where they sold whisky without a license," said Captain Covell, "and there was nothing political about those raids."

Party Official Protests

However, the Progressive Party of the District felt differently about the raid. The party's chairman for the District, Clark Foreman, called upon President Truman "to show his advocacy of civil rights by taking immediate measures to correct this new wave of intimidation on the part of the District police."

Foreman said this was the second time in 10 days that local police broke up "parties composed of white people and Negroes, apparently on the theory that any such party is subversive." He declared the "real reason" for the raid was police "disapproval of the political views which they attributed to those at the party."

Capt. Covell said the raid was organized after he received information that whisky was being sold without a license at the dance. He said he first verified the information by sending detectives to the hall.

After that a warrant was obtained from United States Commissioner Lawrence naming Edwards and Goldreich.

Area News in Brief

Home Builder Held On Theft Warrant

Richard Meatrie, 29, Pennsylvania Railroad fireman, is proud of his home at 1209 58th ave., Hillside, Md. He built it. But Charles A. Busl, 7264 Palmer rd., Oxon Hill, Md., takes a dim view of the project.

Busl claims he supplied part of the material going into Meatrie's home—unknowingly and unwillingly.

Yesterday, on a warrant taken out by Busl, Meatrie was arrested and charged with grand larceny.

It all started som time ago when Busl built three houses on filled-in-ground in Gault pl. se. When the ground settled, the plaster cracked and the beams creaked. And the three houses were condemned.

Recently a nearby resident told police he saw a man leaving one of the conndemned houses with an armload of building material. The nearby resident gave an automobile license number.

Busl, checking the license, came up with a car belonging to Meatrie.

After a visit to Meatrie's home, Busl told police he saw some of the missing flooring, wall trimming and door jambs.

He immediately swore out the warrant charging Meatrie with taking $500 worth of building material, and Meatrie was arrested yesterday by Prince Georges County and District police.

The police report on the case concluded with this statement: "Property not recovered as it is nailed down in house of defendant."

Dollar Donor Award

Russell Mizell, Kensington, Md., lumberman who gave a dollar to each of 1500 wartime draftees of the Silver Spring area, will be given a special award by the Silver Spring Memorial Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Commander Joseph Buscher has appointed William Barnes, Charles Buscher and Earl Ritterbush as a committee to plan the award for Mizell.

The VFW post also has appropriated $100 to purchase American flags for public school classrooms in the Silver Spring area.

Trash Fire Routs Diners

Billowing smoke from a trash fire in the basement of Thompson's restaurant at 1345 E st. nw., drove dinner patrons to the street last night, but the fire was quickly extinguished and no damage resulted.

Four engine companies, two truck companies, a fire chief and rescue squad responded to the alarm near the busy intersection of Pennsylvania ave. and 14th st. nw. Firemen said the blaze, in a trash storage bin, apparently was caused by a cigarette.

Suggestion Boxes Up

More than a dozen suggestion boxes will be placed in Silver Spring, Md., stores today by the Silver Spring Business and Professional Women's Club in an effort to obtain ideas for a club-sponsored community project.

Planned as the club's observance of National Business Women's Week, the boxes are lettered with "Tell us what we can do to help you and our community?" Residents are urged to drop their suggestions into the boxes.

The best ideas will be selected at an open forum November 22.

K. C. to Mark Discovery Of America

The 456th anniversary of the discovery of America by Christopher Columbus will be observed by special programs Tuesday in the Greater Washington area.

The Knights of Columbus will lead observance ceremonies throughout the city with an elaborate wreath-laying at Columbus Memorial Fountain in Union Station Plaza at 11:30 a. m.

William A. Kehoe, state deputy for District, Panama and Puerto Rico Knights of Columbus, will place a wreath at the monument to represent 800,000 members of the order. He will represent John E. Swift of Boston, supreme knight, who is unable to attend.

To Place Wreath

Other members to honor the patron of the order with wreaths, include Dr. George R. Ellis, Washington Master of the Fourth Degree and Leo M. McGuire, Washington grand commander who will place a wreath in the name of 100,000 members of the Order of Alhambra.

Dr. Frederick Rossini, president of the Washington Academy of Science, will be principal speaker at the Italian-American observances at the monument at 10:30 a. m. The Lido Civic Club of Washington will give a dinner dance at the Shoreham Hotel at 7:30 p. m., Dr. Rafael Manganaro, chairman of the club's civic committee, announced yesterday.

Prince Georges County, Md., public offices, banks and some business establishments will be closed Tuesday as Columbus Day is a legal holiday in Maryland.

County schools, however, will remain open and the county Circuit Court and grand jury will remain in session during the day. The Prince Georges County commissioners and the board of education will meet Wednesday instead of Tuesday.

Montgomery County offices, other than State offices, however, will remain open, as well as the Montgomery County schools. Montgomery County banks will be closed.

Although Columbus Day is listed as a holiday in Virginia, Alexandria and Arlington City officials said no observances are planned. The day is not a legal holiday in the District.

Buschmeyer Gets Church Council Post

Election of Dr. Fred Sherman Buschmeyer, minister of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, to be Associate Minister of the General Council of Congregational Christian Churches was announced yesterday.

Dr. Buschmeyers

Dr. Douglas Horton, Minister of the General Council, New York, told the congregation of Dr. Buschmeyer's church of the action yesterday.

After the announcement, Dr. Buschmeyer submitted his resignation, to take effect December 31.

The Mount Pleasant congregation accepted the resignation. On Thursday they will meet to appoint a committee to name a successor.

Dr. Buschmeyer came to Mount Pleasant Church in 1939 after serving in churches in Massachusetts and New Hampshire. He has led the local congregation in the building of a new church, to be completed in the spring, at Westmoreland Circle.

In Washington he has been also president of the Washington Ministerial Union, vice president of the Federation of Churches, and a member of the board of directors of Goodwill Industries, the General Commission on Chaplains, the budget committee of the Community Chest, the board of directors of the American Peace Society, and the advisory committee of the Juvenile Court.

As Associate Minister of the General Council, he will be director of the new department of the ministry. Dr. Buschmeyer will work with students preparing for the Congregational ministry, Army and Navy chaplains, and ministers.

Naval Academy Ends 103 Years Without Fanfare

The United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, yesterday passed its 103d birthday quietly.

No ceremonies were held in recognition of the birthday of the Academy, at which the first class of about 50 midshipmen assembled on October 10, 1845.

Only formal reference to the anniversary — and that a mere mention—was made at services conducted in the Academy's chapel by the Rev. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor of the Lutheran Church of the Reformation in Washington.

Only break in the Naval Academy's history at Annapolis occurred during the Civil War when students were removed to Newport, R. I., aboard the historic frigate Constitution. Buildings and grounds at Annapolis were used during the Civil War as an Army camp.

Bogota Wreck Kills 23

Bogota, Colombia, Oct. 10 (AP).—Twenty-three persons were reported killed and a larger number injured today in a train wreck near Anapoima, on the Magdalena River.

Almas Shrine Pays Tribute To 63 Who Died During Year

The Washington Post

Omer W. Clark leads the Shriners from Almas Temple into the Methodist Memorial Church, Nebraska and New Mexico aves.

Almas Temple of the Shrine yesterday paid tribute to the memory of its 63 members who died during the past year in annual services at Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church, Nebraska and New Mexico aves. nw.

The memorial services began at 3:45 p. m. in a colorful parade by more than 200 uniformed Shriners from Ward Circle to the church. The parade was led by Illustrious Potentate Omer W. Clark and the officers of his divan.

Together with families of the deceased, the Shriners heard Dr. Edward Gardiner Latch, minister, preach on "The Nobles' Benediction."

Dr. Latch, in counseling how to manage the sorrow of bereavement, outlined four steps:

First, he said, is the acceptance of the death of a loved one. After that, the bereaved should "get the point of view of those who have gone," Dr. Latch said.

The third step is to "do something good for others." Finally bereaved persons should "keep their religious belief," the minister counseled.

Participating in the necrology were Clark, Chief Rabban Renah F. Camaller, and Assistant Rabban Julius B. Gay.

Besides the officers of the Temple, uniformed Shriners in the parade included the military band, legion of honor, patrol, drum corps and oriental band.

Central Union

Mission Rally Hears Minn. Governor

By putting Christianity into practice we can find our way out of the present situation of unrest and strife, Gov. Luther Youngdahl of Minnesota said yesterday.

Governor Youngdahl spoke at a mass meeting marking the sixty-fourth anniversary of Central Union Mision, 613 C st. nw., at Constitution Hall.

Because of the "tragic lack" of inner spiritual qualities necessary to build a better world, he said, we are living in constant fear of destruction by the products of our scientific achievement.

"We have devoted ourselves to the quest for scientific knowledge and have failed to learn to live together in peace," Youngdahl declared. "Only enlightenment in human relation can eliminate the fears which becloud the future of mankind."

Youngdahl paid tribute to the mission for "bringing new hope to thousands of lonely and needy people. It is truly a beacon light in a world of darkness," he concluded.

Col. William S. Culbertson, former United States Ambassador to Chile, introduced Governor Youngdahl. The children's choirs of Calvary Baptist Church and Homer Rodeheaver and Ruth Rodeheaver Thomas presented the musical portions of the program.

Widow Found Hanged in Cellar of Home

Mrs. Katharine E. Batson, 53, a widow for many years and an employe of the General Accounting Office for more than 25 years, was found hanged yesterday in her home at 5321 13th st. nw.

The discovery was made by Mrs. Batson's son-in-law, Kenneth Hess, of 5508 Roosevelt st., Bethesda. Hess went to Mrs. Batson's home to investigate after a friend reported he had been unable to reach her by telephone.

After entering the house in which Mrs. Batson lived alone, Hess found a pencil-written note on the kitchen table. It was addressed to "Honey," Mrs. Batson's daughter, Doris, and the wife of Hess.

The note, police said later, indicated Mrs. Batson planned to take her life but offered no explanation.

When he reached the basement, Hess found the body. It was dangling by a clothes line that had been secured to a water pipe. Friends said she had undergone medical treatment recently, although she appeared in good health and spirits.

Dr. Christopher S. Murphy, deputy coroner, issued a verdict of suicide.

Miss May Gelletly

Baltimore, Oct. 10 (AP).—Miss May F. Gelletly, 62, Baltimore artist whose works were exhibited in the United States and France, died today.

A native Baltimorean, she was graduated from the Maryland Institute and maintained a studio here for many years.

Funeral services will be conducted at the grave in Blandford Cemetery at 3:30 p. m. Monday.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Dessie Jones Elmore; a daughter, Mrs. Abner Kees Butterworth of DeWitt; two sisters, Mrs. Lynn Smith of Danieltown and Mrs. Southall Rives of McKenney and three brothers, W. Emory Elmore of Lawrenceville, C. Vernon Elmore of McRenney and W. Cabell Elmore of Carson.

Mrs. Jane Deming

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 10 (AP).—Funeral services will be held here tomorrow for Mrs. Jane May Deming, wife of the deputy medical examiner for Allegany County, Dr. H. V. Deming.

Mrs. Deming died Friday in Memorial Hospital after suffering a stroke. A native of Roseboom, N. Y., she and Dr. Deming moved here in 1906.

Miss Waller Of 'Clifton' Is Dead at 82

Miss Mildred Tickett Waller, 82, one of eight daughters of the late Col. Withers Waller who owned the historic Wide Water, Va., homestead, Clifton, died Saturday in Wheeling, W. Va.

Miss Waller had been living with a niece, Mrs. A. L. Osterman of Wheeling, since the family home burned two years ago. Her death was attributed to a stroke.

Born at Clifton, Miss Waller was the daughter of Colonel Waller and Mrs. Anne Stribling Waller. As a young girl, she recalled the eventful minute and a half flight of Prof. Samuel Pierpont Langley's "lighter than air" craft the Aerodrome which crashed into the Potomac in front of Clifton in 1896. The Langley flight and the Wright brothers' flight in 1906 involved a controversy that lasted the full span of her life.

She also recalled the visits of President Grover Cleveland, when he hunted with her father at Clifton, during his administrations—1885 to 1889 and 1893 to 1897.

Miss Waller took a leading part in State and county activities of the Episcopal Church Women's Auxiliary. She was a member of the Aquia Episcopal Church of Stafford County all her life. Also, she was a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution and the National Society of Colonial Dames.

Miss Waller is survived by two sisters, Mrs. A. J. Pyke of Richland, Va., and Mrs. R. A. Moncure of Stafford County, Va., and 31 nephews and nieces.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday at 2 p. m. at the Aquia Church, Aquia, Va. Burial will be in the church cemetery.

Dr. Milton P. Hill

Baltimore, Oct. 10 (AP).—Funeral services will be held Monday morning for Dr. Milton Painter Hill, 64, former physician-in-chief at Mount Hope Retreat. He died at his Baltimore home yesterday.

Dr. Hill retired as head physician at Mount Hope in 1946, having served there since 1918. He founded the graduate nurses' training school there.

Anselmo Marabini

Imola, Italy, Oct. 10 (U.P.).—Anselmo Marabini, 93, who was known as the "dean of Italian Communists," died Saturday, it was announced today.

Marabini was one of the founders of the Italian Communist Party in 1921. He lived in Russia for 20 years during Italy's fascist regime, returning to Italy in 1943.

C. C. Wilson, Salesman, Is Dead at 67

Claude C. Wilson, sr., 67, salesman for Decker Distributing Co., 260 35th st. ne., and a resident of Washington since 1934, died Saturday at Garfield Hospital of coronary occlusion.

According to his son, Claude, jr., of 4339 Harrison st. nw., he first complained of feeling ill while on a train returning here from a business trip in New York. He was taken to the hospital early Saturday and succumbed shortly after.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Tuesday at Hines Funeral Home, 2901 14th st. nw. Burial will be private.

A native of Richmond, Mr. Wilson received his education there and came to Washington 14 years ago. Earlier, he had operated photographic studios in Roanoke and, during World War I, was a photographer at Camp Lee, Va. He entered the sales field more than 20 years ago.

Besides his son, he is survived by his wife, Mrs. Hazel E. Wilson, with whom he made his home at 3327 17th st. nw., and a daughter, Mrs. Mary E. Bickford, presently en route to Germany with her husband.

Mr. Wilson is also survived by a sister, Mrs. Eva Duggan of Fillmore Gardens, Arlington, and two brothers, T. A. and David R. Wilson, both of Richmond.

7 Army Dead To Be Buried Here Tuesday

Pvt. Albert B. Stock, native Washingtonian killed in action on the German border in World War II, will be among seven Army dead to be reinterred at 2 p. m. Tuesday at Arlington National Cemetery.

Mr. Stock

Private Stock, 24, was killed December 16, 1944, while serving as an Infantry photographer on the border of Germany.

A graduate of Central High School in 1938, he was employed by the War Department as a photographer before going into the Army in 1944. Besides his father, Benjamin Stock of 1210 B st. ne., he is survived by a sister, Mrs. Dorothy Chaplin of Miami, Fla.

Here's one foot of large telephone cable, actual size. Inside are 4,242 wires.

About 1,750,000 feet of cable of various sizes have been added since V-J day to improve and expand telephone service in this city. And more are being added every day.

This is only a small part of a tremendous program of construction now well under way. The program is costing millions of dollars.

All this construction money comes from investors—people who have faith in the future of the Telephone Company. They entrust their money to us because they believe their investments will be safe and will pay them a fair return.

Even in normal times, the huge sums needed for new construction must come from investors. On the other hand, the money you pay for telephone service goes to meet everyday expenses—wages, materials and other operating costs.

Today, these expenses are at the highest peak in our history.

Williams and Stevens Among Party Hosts

By Marie McNair

Austine and Helen are two names well-known to the fashion world and the fashion-conscious. They're a narrating team every Monday at their own style show.

In private life Austine is Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, jr.; Helene's friends know her as Mrs. Gladstone Williams.

It was in these roles that Mrs. Williams and Mr. Williams, too, entertained at cocktails yesterday at the Sulgrave Club for Mr. and Mrs. Hearst, not long back from a honeymoon on the West Coast.

Yesterday, too, Lieut. and Mrs. Hugh L. S. Stevens 3d had a party, inviting some of their young friends to meet Miss Ursula Buckley on a return visit from England, and Mr. and Mrs. Rockwood Foster—she was Marguerite Peet of Kansas City—who are making Washington their home.

Miss Buckley, who was maid of honor for Virginia Stephens at her wedding, will divide up her time and will visit Mrs. Stevens' parents, Col. and Mrs. Horace Smith.

Helene and Austine, both slim and pretty and brunette, looked something alike yesterday in long black gowns, Helene Williams' black velvet tunic over black lace caught up at the side with a cluster of brown mink tails. Austine looked like a portrait in sweeping black velvet with a rare old lace collar edging the high neck and deep cuffs on the long sleeves.

Family Here

Up from Warrenton were Austine's parents, Maj. Austin McDonnell and Mrs. McDonnell; their son, Chilton, and Mrs. Thomas Vickery an aunt, with her son, Tom.

I saw Mrs. Tom Clark, wife of the Attorney General, in a black frock and two tiny salmon and blue ostrich tips on her bonnet-type hat. Clarence Hewes was introducing his sister, Mrs. Robert Flowerree, visiting him from New Orleans, and Jack Logan had with him a Mrs. Kemper, good-looking visitor from Kansas City. Leslie Biffle was in his usual good humor, leaving it to Mrs. Biffle to deny the rumors that they're soon to leave Washington.

Mrs. Lee Murphy in stiff black taffeta and a matching feathered bonnet stayed much too long to ever make her bridge game on time. Pen Hogan took time out from getting unpacked in his Georgetown home to greet old friends, and coming in late were Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse and Peter Ansberry with Mrs. Ansberry still getting around on crutches after a series of accidents last summer.

Edward van Devanter, George Williams and former Senator Henry Ashurst were being attentive "extra men," and others there were Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, Mrs. Tom Blake, who never worries with a hat; Mrs. Martin Vogel wearing a smart smoke white hat, and with her, her pretty guest, Nan Garcia "surrounded" by Parr Johnson.

Drinking Champagne

Senate George and Comdr. Whiting Wicker, whose wedding bells will ring on October 23, were drinking champagne together with "that look" in their eyes; Joseph E. Davies was an early arrival and then there were Mr. and Mrs. Royce Powell, Mrs. Constantine de Stackelberg with a fresh white orchid pinned to her shoulder, handsome Lady Lewis and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim chatting in the doorway.

The Roy St. Lewises were there and Mrs. Wiliam T. Mann, Douglas Hatch, without Mrs. Hatch who stayed home to nurse a cold; Mrs. Jack York, from Middleburg; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Morrison from North Carolina; Mrs. Morrison in black with a pale blue ostrich hat; Mrs. Allen Krebs in all black with ostrich sweeping to shoulder length; Mr. and Mrs. Jim Wright, Mrs. Jay Hayden, former French Premier, Camille Chautemps with his family—Mme. Chautemps wearing a black and white flecked ostrich hat from her own smart shop; and with them her son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. T. Tayloe Perry.

More? Well, Representative and Mrs. Eugene Cox, Mrs. Katharine Byron topping her brown frock with a flame-colored feather hat.

Hessler

Miss Beatrice MacArthur, daughter of Mrs. Littlefield MacArthur, and Bowman MacArthur, who will be a debutante this year. Her party will be a tea dance December 29 at the Chevy Chase Club

Luncheons Planned for Style Show

Mrs. Carroll Morgan and Mrs. Andrew Saul will entertain together at the fashion show and luncheon to be held at the Shoreham on Wednesday for the benefit of the Christ Child Farm for Convalescent Children. Others who will have parties are Mrs. J. Edgar Murdock and Mrs. Andrew Parker. Reservations for tables should be made today with Mrs. Benwood Hunter, jr.

Among new patronesses for the event are: Mrs. George R. Beneman, Mrs. Howard Boyd, Mrs. Donald Buckingham, Mrs. Alexander T. Burton, Mrs. Robert J. Coffey, Mrs. Michael Colbert, Mrs. Murray M. Copeland, Mrs. John F. Crosby, Mrs. Stanley de Neale, Mrs. Walter Distler, Mrs. J. E. Duke, Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis, Miss Orlene Fenwick, Mrs. John T. Haas, Mrs. O. Benwood Hunter, jr., Mrs. Oscar B. Hunter, Mrs. J. Bay Jacobs, Mrs. William S. Abell, Dr. H. Gladys Kain, Mrs. Michael Keogh, Mrs. Raymond Kirchner, Mrs. H. Donald Kistler, Mrs. Ida May Madigan, Mrs. Maurice May, Mrs. Paul May, Mrs. Arthur McConville, Mrs. Michael McInerney, Miss Mary Virginia Merrick, Mrs. Edward L. Morrison, Mrs. Dermot A. Nee, Miss Evelyn Nee, Mrs. Charles P. Neill, Mrs. J. Kerby Neill, Mrs. John E. Powell, Mrs. Joseph Richards, Mrs. William H. Rippard, Miss Rose Saul, Mrs. Charles W. Semmes, Mrs. Evan A. Sholl, Mrs. George H. Shevlin, Mrs. Edward A. Tamm, Mrs. South Trimble, sr. and Mrs. C. W. Wright.

Mrs. William S. Abell is chairman of the benefit.

Mrs Tait Returns

Mrs. de Sparre Tait has returned from more than a year in Europe and is again at her home in Georgetown. Mrs. Tait was in Italy for several months and was joined by her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. George Tait, who later went to Switzerland.

Visits Here

Second Secretary of the Norwegian Embassy and Mrs. Elovious Mangor had as their weekend guest Knut Hedlund.

Montgomery's Thrift Shop Bric-a-Brac Tea to Benefit

Montgomery County Thrift Shop's fourth annual bric-a-brac tea will be held at Ashwood, the home of Mrs. T. Calvin Owens, from 2 to 6 p. m. Tuesday, October 12.

Among those who have been invited are Mrs. Dean Acheson, wife of the former Secretary of State; Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, wife of the former Secretary of Interior; Mrs. Millard Tydings, wife of Senator Tydings; Mrs. Herbert O'Conor, wife of Senator O'Conor; Mrs. Tasco Davis, wife of the State Senator; Mrs. Brooke Johns, Mrs. Wesley Sauter, Mrs. Oliver W. Also Mrs. A. R. Lofstrand, Mrs. Leona C. Rush, Mrs. John R. Reeves, Mrs. DeWitt Hyde, Mrs. Julian King, Mrs. R. Duncan Clerk, wives of the members of the House of Delegates.

Bric-a-Brac to Be Sold

The price of admission to the tea is one unwrapped piece of bric-a-brac. The articles donated will be sold at the annual auction sale at the Thrift Shop, 4715 Hampden la., Bethesda, on Tuesday, October 26. The proceeds will be spent for health, welfare and educational work in Montgomery County by the four participating agencies. Mrs. Clifford Rodlun, president, and members of the executive board have invited anyone interested to come to the tea.

The following chairmen and committees are arranging the benefit: Mrs. T. Calvin Owens, general chairman; Mrs. Frank P. Wilcox, cochairman; Mrs. Oliver Kincannon, in charge of invitations; Mrs. Arthur W. Palmer and Mrs. Phillip Fisher, refreshments; Mrs. Horatio Wales and Mrs. Wendall Gould, door committee; Mrs. Donald Roberts and Mrs. Frederick Thomas, reception of special guests; Mrs. John Graham Thompson, transportation.

Heads Hostesses

Mrs. Howard P. Bailey, chairman of hostess; Mrs. Fred Strine, chairman of music; Mrs. Francis Thomas, refreshment services; Mrs. William Mobley and Miss Lulu Bell, gift chairmen. Others assisting include Mrs. Margaret Jacob, Mrs. Stanton Bryan, Mrs. Lesley Ashburner, Mrs. Frank A. Mucha and Mrs. Charles Carr.

Among those who will pour at the tea are Mrs. B. Peyton Whalen, Mrs. E. A. Merritt, Mrs. Robert Huse, Mrs. Roger Whiteford, Mrs. H. Dec. Adams, Mrs. Alvin Aubinoe, Mrs. Katherine Sterling, Mrs. Clifford Rodlun, Mrs. F. P. Wilcox, Mrs. Donald Roberts, Mrs. Howard P. Bailey, Mrs. O. Nile Harkins, Mrs. Wendall Gould, Mrs. Arthur W. Ringland, Mrs. T. H. Patterson, Mrs. Arthur Palmer and Mrs. Louis A. Gravelle.

Mrs. William L. Dalrymple and Mrs. William G. Allen are in charge of the models who will show John Frederic hats from the Thrift Shop.

Arlington Voters To Hear Debate

A debate on a controversial local issue in the November election and the presentation of their views by four candidates for the County Board of Commissioners will mark the first public meeting of the 1948-49 season sponsored by the League of Women Voters of Arlington, to be held Tuesday evening at 8 p. m. at the Ashton Heights Woman's Club, 413 N. Irving st.

The four candidates to speak are: Jacob Bechtel, independent; Francis J. Clair, independent; Alfred E. Frisbie, Democratic nominee, and Lee Potter, independent.

A curtain raiser to the candidates' speeches will be a brief debate on the referendum: "Shall a nonpartisan election for members of the County School Board be held on the second Tuesday in May of the odd-numbered years instead of at the general election in the odd-numbered years." State Senator Charles R. Fenwick will urge a change in the election date and Dr. Oscar R. LeBeau, former chairman of the Citizens' Committee for School Improvement, will oppose a change.

Tuckermans Fete Newly Married Pair

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Tuckerman entertained at dinner Saturday evening at the Chevy Chase Club for Lieut. and Mrs. David B. Holdsworth, who have just returned from their honeymoon in Bermuda. Mrs. Holdsworth is the former Miss Lorraine Graham Bacon. Other guests were members of the wedding party.

Ladies' Board Of Hospital Plans Benefit

To raise money for its "special needs fund" the Ladies' Board of Emergency Hospital is sponsoring a fashion show and luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel on Tuesday, November 9, when Garfinckel's will present morning, afternoon and evening costumes created by one of America's great designers.

Mrs. F. Hamilton McCormick-Goodhart has taken over the chairmanship of the benefit and between flying trips to Boston has appointed her various chairmen. Those with definite joms are: Mrs. Carroll Morgan, program; Mrs. Theodore Babbitt, advertising; Mrs. McKee Dunn, usher; Mrs. Pearsons Rust, Mrs. Percy Black and Mrs. Ralph Whitley, tickets; Mrs. John McCloy, tables; Mrs. Dwight F. Davis and Mrs. Fay, patronesses; Lady Welsh, president of the Ladies' Board, and Miss Gertrude V. D. Prisley, publicity.

Door prizes will feature the show, and a well known commentator will present the pretty models as they parade down the ramp.

Gen., Mrs. Akin To Receive at Signal Corps Fete

Signal Corps officers stationed along the East Coast will renew friendships at a semiannual buffet supper and dance at Washington's Army-Navy Country Club Friday night, October 15. This major fall social event for the Signal Corps will begin at 6:30 p. m. with cocktails, with supper following an hour later.

The receiving line will be headed by Maj. Gen. Spencer B. Akin, the chief signal officer, and Mrs. Akin.

While most of the guests will come from Washington and nearby Army posts, some are expected from Fort Monmouth, N. J., and the Signal Corps Photographic Center on Long Island.

Dress will be formal, with Class A uniforms or tuxedos for officers. Music will be by the Meyer Davis Orchestra.

Arrangements are being made by a committee headed by Brig. Gen. C. H. Arnold. Others on the committee are Lieut. Col. Benjamin H. Pochyla, Lieut. Col. James M. Kimbrough, Maj. Thomas S. Schreiber, Maj. James L. Burke, and Capt. John L. Gammon. All are in the Office of the Chief Signal Officer at the Pentagon.

Senator-Elect Margaret Smith Addresses New York Women

(From Press Dispatch)

New York, Oct. 10.—Senator-Elect Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.) said today that "We must replace Government control with self-control."

She told a meeting of the New York League of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Inc.:

"When all our powerful groups begin to be guided by sound principles of economics in production and division of profits, they will find that mutual interest brings social responsibility.

"Government regulation can be held within minimum limits by a workable systtem of self-regulation.

"In brief, all of us must come to the realization that we are interdependent—that modern-day living conditions have made all of us dependent to some extent upon others—that all of us are affected to some degree by the actions of each other—and that the days of rugged individualism and rugged independence have disappeared over the horizon."

Mrs. Smith said "We Americans are faced with four big factors: big business, big unionism, big Government and big debt.

"We can't really have internal peace unless we recognize the part that these four major factors must play in our future," she said.

"These four factors must be reconciled and we must find the way. Russia is hoping that our 'Big Four' will cause national suicide instead of being reconciled—that is what Russia is counting on to defeat us in the long run."

Commissioner Frieda B. Hennock, first woman to be appointed to the Federal Communications Commission, spoke on the same program with Senator-Elect Smith. She urged women to try for higher and higher places in Government and business, citing figures to show that the percentage of women in high positions was extremely small in comparison with the 17 million women directly engaged in gainful occupation.

"Figures alone mean little—even feminine figures," said Miss Hennock. "Thes- indicate that we should aspire to higher places and more responsible positions in the world."

The two speeches, broadcast over CBS, were made at a luncheon at the Biltmore Hotel on the occasion of the opening of National Business Women's Week.

Rally Opens NCNW's Yearly Convention

Necessity of more social education for children of all races was emphasized yesterday at the mass civil rights rally of the National Council of Negro Women at the Commerce Department auditorium.

Nearly one thousand women from every section of the United States and Canada attended the rally which opened the Council's 13th annual convention in Washington.

Mrs. Sadie T. M. Alexander, attorney and member of President Truman's committee on Civil Rights, told the delegates that she would "sacrifice everything . . . for the freedom of Negro childre in generations to come."

Equal education, beginning in kindergarten and the early grades, is the easiest way of improving the Negro race and the country in general, she said.

She expressed the opinion that the American people face an era of purges and "Gestapo restrictions" unless they "immediately narrow the gap between what we preach and what we practice."

She pointed out that our Constitution and Federal laws provide equal opportunities—both education and employment—for all people, but that in many sections of the country this tradition is not practiced.

Mrs. Alexander was followed on the program by Dr. Ethel J. Alpenfels, associate professor of education at New York University, who has recently completed a Nation-wide study of social education in public schools.

Mrs. Bethune Presides

Dr. Alpenfels urged that children be taught early in their lives human relationships between nationalities and races. Education—and particularly education at a very early age—is the surest way of combating group inequality and prejudice, she continued.

Mr. Mary McLeod Bethune, founder and president of the N.C.N.W., made the welcoming address and presided at the meeting. Mrs. Julia West Hamilton, president of the Phyllis Wheatley Y.W.C.A., gave the invocation, and Fmmer Lancaster of the Commerce Department and Dr. Charlotte Hawkins Brown, president of the Palmer Memorial Institute, offered greetings at the rally's opening.

Mary Caldwell Dawson, founder and president of the National Negro Opera Company, sang two operatic selections with accompaniment by John R. Hoskins. Helena Mayle of the department of fine arts in religion of Howard University, also, sang. Her accompanist was Ethel Ramos Harris.

Mrs. Muriel Johnson, chairman of the program committee, introduced the special guests who included Mrs. Olga Margolin, representing the National Council of Jewish Women; Miss Elizabeth Christman, executive secretary of the Women's Trade Union League, and Georgia Ellis Jones, a Chicago, Ill. attorney.

At the close of the program, Miss Mary Church Terrell, prominent Negro educational and civic leader, presented the council with an oil painting of its president, Mrs. Bethune, painted by William Sylvester Carter.

Miss Gruber to Talk To Hadassah Group

Miss Ruth Gruber, noted foreign correspondent, and author of the recently published book, "Destination Palestine," will be guest speaker at the minimum pledge luncheon of the Washington Chapter of Hadassah on Monday, November 29. Mrs. Cecil Kaufman, chairman of arrangements for the event, announces. The luncheon is for the benefit of the Hadassah Medical Organization to secure supplies and equipment for the Hadassah hospitals, clinics, and welfare stations in Palestine.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Married 10 Years to Brilliant Lawyer, Whom She Almost Divorced Two Years Ago, Wife Finds Now That He's Been Hiding Money Since

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been married 10 years to a brilliant successful lawyer, who has great ability and many admirable qualities, but he is inherently selfish and completely egocentric. I soon learned that if our marriage was to last I would have to do the adjusting, as the faculty of "compromise" is unknown to him.

Prior to marriage I had achieved considerable recognition and financial success in business and was economically independent; hence I was astonished when, on pooling our assets, Marvin put everything in his name. Yet he was most indignant when I voiced surprise, so I dismissed the issue as unimportant.

This type of procedure has persisted and finally, two years ago, I started divorce, feeling that I wasn't a marriage partner in any sense, as our sex relations had long since waned. Although I had threatened divorce many times, Marvin was completely shocked and begged another chance, saying he hadn't realized how wrong he had been.

In Early Thirties, They Are Childless

I STOPPED the divorce action, but now I have learned that starting immediately thereafter, Marvin has deliberately deceived me about his income, and in so doing has contrived to set aside a considerable sum entirely in his name. As yet he doesn't know that I am aware of his dishonesty, which is a terrible blow to me, and in view of it I feel I can't possibly go on living a life that now, to me, is only for appearance's sake.

We are now in our thirties and have no children, simply because I never felt secure enough in marriage to start a family, and Marvin has always been too busy to give it much thought, except to express a desire for one child only,—if and when! Incidentally, our backgrounds are similar, except that he is an only child, whereas I am the youngest of five.

I dread the thought of divorce and feel that I shall probably be the greater loser of the two; but I also believe that it would enable me to find myself again; and more importantly, I hope to find peace of mind, something I haven't had in a very long time. What do you think? I shall be very grateful for your opinion. C. P.

Joined in Struggle for Ego-Supremacy?

DEAR C. P.: Perhaps there are two "inherently selfish, completely egocentric" individuals here, joined in a struggle for dominance, of which you are beginning to weary, after long frustration and recent jolt.

Marvin got his jolt two years ago, in your maneuver to start divorce; and it seems he construed it as the handwriting on the wall and began furtively to hide out savings against the day of final punitive financial accounting.

Your self-made business success before marriage, which netted "recognition" and economic independence at an early age, suggests a forceful calculated approach to life: a pretty clear knowledge of what you were after, and shrewd persistence in working towards it; and perhaps you married Marvin, the brilliant lawyer, more for ambitious opportunistic reasons than for love, a word you don't mention in discussing him.

Possibly your immediate objective was to live in style at his expense, meanwhile gradually wrapping him around your finger, to be used as obliging patron and buffer in subsequent prestige-seeking drives you might devise; which may explain your hushed acquiescence to his prompt gobbling-up of joint assets,—a bit of finesse (with more to follow) that you hoped would hit the jackpot eventually.

Is Wistful Wife a Sharp Trader?

THE FACT that you've cannily refrained from having children, biding a time when you might feel advantageously entrenched, also your repetitious threats of divorce, culminating in the serious scare dealt Marvin two years ago, suggest that you've never been more than tentatively committed to the marriage, and entered it rather in the spirit of exploiting an option, with "independent" intent to call off the deal and get out, comparatively unscathed, if it didn't yield profits satisfactory to you.

If this is somewhat the story of your temperament and attitude, and if Marvin wanted to hold you and is himself a petty character, doubtless he'd try to win (at first) by clipping your wings financially; and one wonders if sex relations waned long ago because such estrangement was your way of snubbing him for displeasing you. If so, you are a pretty flinty trader, despite your wistful manner of speech.

For advice: read Dr. Edmund Bergler's book, "Divorce Won't Help" (Harper & Brothers, publishers), and canvass your motives from stem to stern with specialist help, before striking vengefully at Marvin's defensive deceit in money matters. M. H.

Quotarians Plan Conclave October 16-17

Approximately 100 Quotarians from the Quota Clubs in Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey and the District of Columbia will gather at the Mayflower Hotel October 16-17 for a two-day conference, according to an announcement made by Miss Bess Glenn, president of the local group. The Washington Quota Club will be hostess to the visiting delegates.

Included on Saturday's conference agenda are a 12:30 p. m. luncheon, followed by election of officers and a banquet at 7:30 p. m., with Dr. Adrienne Koch, associate professor of philosophy, as principal speaker. The speaker has been a special lecturer aboard the Freedom Train.

Honor guests at the banquet will be the retiring officers of the Tenth District of Quota International, "Governor" Eleanor Kerr, "Lieutenant Governor" Eva Wimbrow, and Secretary Clara Nagel, together with their newly elected successors, and past Quota International Presidents Lulu Dryden and Mary Northam, Toastmaster Sibyl Baker of the Washington Club, President Fern Schneider of the neighboring Quota Club of Montgomery County, Miss Gwladys Jones, general secretary of Quota International.

Following Dr. Koch's address, the new officers of the Tenth District will be installed.

How to Prevent Mold on Sirup

We use very little sirup, but each time I buy a can or jar, in a few weeks it is covered with mold. How can I prevent this?
V. G.

Room temperature is an ideal temperature for the growth of mold, so to prevent mold on open jars of sirup, store in the refrigerator. Another way to prevent mold is to bring the unused portion of sirup to a boil and seal while boiling hot in a sterilized jar. But, of course, as soon as the jar is opened, the sirup may mold if allowed to remain at room temperature.

I have an alabaster lamp base which has become yellow and dingy. Is there any way I can restore the original color and finish? H. B. R.

Soiled, stained or discolored ornaments of alabaster can be cleaned with a solution of oxalic acid, 1 ounce dissolved in 1 quart of water. This solution is wiped or brushed on, allowed to act for a minute or two, then wiped off with clear water. If necessary, the application can be repeated. After drying, a thin coat of white beeswax dissolved in turpentine will prevent further discoloration.

Having noted in your column a request for Banana Nut Cake, I would like to pass on a very excellent one I have. I'm sure all your readers will agree that this recipe is simple and still delicious.
J. C. M.

Banana Nut Cake

Cream 1½ cups of sugar and ½ cup butter. Add 2 well-beaten eggs and 1 cup mashed bananas and beat well. Add 4 tablespoons sour milk, in which 1 teaspoon soda is dissolved. Add 1¾ cups flour, mixed with 2 tablespoons baking powder and ¼ teaspoon salt, and beat well. Then add 1 cup of chopped nuts.

This makes two layers or a loaf cake. A butter frosting is best for this cake.

Some time ago I read in a magazine of a service that will seal up a house and fill the entire house with a chemical fog which kills all insects and keeps the house free of insects for a period of three months. Is such a service available in Washington? If so, how can I get in touch with them? J. B.

One firm that gives such service is located in the 900 block of I st. nw. and can be telephoned at National 6478. This treatment is not recommended in all cases. The firm usually examines the house first, then prescribes the treatment best suited to the situation.

How does one remove candle wax from a crocheted table cloth, and a table top?
R. A. H.

Remove as much of the wax as possible with a dull knife. Then place the stain on the cloth between clean white blotters and press with a just warm iron, changing the blotters as they become soiled. When the wax is thus removed, take out any remaining grease by sponging with carbon tetrachloride. If some color remains, sponge with a liquid made of one cup denatured alcohol and two cups water.

To remove the wax from the table top, scrape away as much as possible with a dull knife, and then sponge with tetrachloride. Holding an ice cube onto the wax before attempting to remove it will make it hard and easier to remove. Be sure to wipe up any water immediately.

Bishop—Bracken

I would appreciate a recipe for a simple casserole dish for 40 for a guild luncheon. It must be reasonable, as the expenses are paid by the committee.
M. E. S.

For a thrifty dish, use one of the relatively inexpensive cereals, such as macaroni. Macaroni a la Creme is a good one. To serve 40, use:

- 1½ pounds of macaroni, broken in 1-inch pieces
- 2 pounds of onions, finely minced
- 1½ quarts finely diced celery
- 1½ cups margarine
- 1½ cups flour
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 1 teaspoon pepper
- 3 quarts milk
- 3 cups undiluted canned tomato soup
- 3 pounds diced mild American cheese
- ¾ pound bacon

Cook macaroni, onions, and celery togethed in boiling water until macaroni is tender, adding more hot water if necessary to keep macaroni from sticking. Place macaroni and vegetables in well-greased baking dish. Blend tomato soup into a white sauce made of margarine, salt, pepper, flour and milk. Pour this sauce over the macaroni in the baking dish. Sprinkle cheese and bacon over the top. Bake 20 minutes in a moderate oven, 350 degrees Fahrenheit.

Will you tell me the quantities to use in making apple sauce for forty? M. E. S.

For apple sauce for 40, use 15 pounds of apples and 5 to 7 cups of sugar, depending upon the tartness of the apples. Cinnamon and nutmeg may be added to the sauce when cooked if you wish.

Lapham Due To Report on North China

By A. T. Steele

Peiping, Oct. 10 (NYHT).—Roger D. Lapham, chief of the Economic Cooperation Administration mission to China, is due to return to Washington this week with a report and recommendations on the critical North China situation.

It is reliably reported that as a result of high-level conferences in Peiping, Tientsin and Tsingtao, Lapham will make positive proposals for accelerating American aid to this hard-pressed region.

Several questions intimately touching on American aid policy in China have been considered during Lapham's North China meetings. They include the following questions:

Should the United States take a more active line in bolstering Nationalist resistance to Communist pressure in North China and Manchuria? How can the bottleneck be broken on the purchase and delivery of military supplies sought by the Chinese government under the 120 million dollar military aid grant passed by Congress? How strong an attitude should the United States take with reference to the defense of Tsingtao, now headquarters of the United States' naval forces in the western Pacific, if that port comes under Communist attack?

From the beginning of the ECA program there has been a good deal of argument as to how big a part of the allocations should be expended in North China, where the risks are greater but the needs are more immediate. American officials have maintained that the interests of both China and the United States would be served best by throwing maximum material assistance behind the North China organization of Gen. Fu Tso-yi, whose armies are the major barrier between Communist-controlled Manchuria and China proper.

At Tsintao, Vice Admiral Oscar C. Badger and his American naval units are in an extremely anomalous spot. Some clarification of the American position there is long overdue. It is becoming increasingly difficult for the United States Navy to continue a neutral role in China's civil war while attempting to retain a base in Chinese territory. Washington may soon be forced to make up its mind one way or another by the pressure of Chinese military events.

All Lutheran Churches Are Urged to Unite

Philadelphia, Oct. 10 (AP).—A plea for unification of all Lutheran churches today—"tomorrow may not be ours"—was made tonight at a mass meeting of the United Lutheran Church of America by the president of another group of Lutherans.

"There is no important basic difference between Lutherans in America to prevent them from getting together," asserted the Rev. P. O. Bersell of Minneapolis, president of the Augustana Lutheran Synod.

He made his plea to nearly 3000 here for the sixteenth biennial convention of the United Lutheran Church of America which represents some 1,800,000 Lutherans in 32 synods in the United States, Canada and four United States Territories.

Dr. Bersell warned: "There is a great power (arising) which holds a threat to Christianity."

"Atheistic communism," he said, is "one of the banner bearers" of the threat to Christianity.

One of the results, he said, of the Amsterdam meeting of the World Council of Churches which he attended "will be gathering together of the great church families of the world.

"Let us Lutherans show the way. Let us unite—today. Tomorrow is not ours."

In addition to the United Lutheran Church in America, there are eight other Lutheran branches: the Evangelical Lutherans, the American Lutherans, the Danish Evangelical Lutherans, the United Evangelical Lutherans, the Augustana Lutherans, the Finnish Synod, the Lutheran Free Church, and the Missouri Lutheran Synod.

New Device Warns Doctors In Operations

Philadelphia, Oct. 10 (AP). — A blood pressure measuring device perfected in the University of Pennsylvania research laboratories lessens the danger of heart failure and shock to patients being operated upon, it was disclosed today.

The device Pennsylvania officials said, makes it possible for surgeons "to institute more swiftly corrective measures which safeguard the life of the patient."

The key of the new instrument, which detects oncoming shock and failing heart action well in advance, is a recording manometer developed in Pennsylvania's Johnson Foundation for Medical Physics.

"A direct hookup of the manometer with the bloodstream by way of an artery makes possible the precise recording of blood pressure in man, beat by beat," the announcement said.

"The new method of taking blood pressure marks a decided improvement over the old cuff-pressure procedure which involved the use of a tightwrapping for the arm, an air-pumping syringe and a recording device known as a sphygnomanometer.

Dr. Robert D. Dripps, head of the department of anesthesiology in university hospital, said the new device when employed in the operating room enables the surgeon "to predict those surgical manipulations which can or cannot be tolerated by the patient, and to be governed accordingly."

National Presbyterian

Administration and teaching of the new curriculum of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., will be the subject of a clinic at the National Presbyterian Church, 18th and N sts. nw., from 3 to 5 p. m. and 7 to 9 p. m. today. The clinic is sponsored by the Presbytery of Washington City, which launched the new program here October 3.

Reporter, Pony Suffer Parallel Ailments (Dizzy Spells)

A reporter for our morning contemporary did a piece Friday about a pony which always goes around in circles.

Inasmuch as some reporters behave in exactly the same manner, I do not consider this pony's idiosyncrasy particularly newsworthy.

But this guy did. So he wrote himself a piece about the pony.

To give it a bright touch, he remarked that the pony longed to stop going around in circles, because he wanted to switch to such other geometric figures as squares, triangles and "parolellograms, which he couldn't even spell."

Shortly after that edition hit the street, it must have become obvious that the pony was not alone in his spelling deficiency. So, in the following edition, a correction was made.

This time it was "paralellograms."

By this time, the pony must have been pacing furiously, in ever-widening arcs, meantime writing circular letters to all his equine friends, denying any responsibility for such atrocious spelling. I could hardly wait for the "final" to hit the street, to find out how it would all come out.

And that's just what happened. In the final, it all came out. Apparently giving the whole thing up as more bother than it was worth, the editors killed the story and left the pony to its own devices.

I tried to interview the pony, to get his reaction. But he cut me off with a curt: "I have nothing further to say to reporters."

MISCELLANY

Dr. Frederick H. Burgoyne of 215 8th st. sw. sends me a wonderful article on traffic safety, clipped from a paper published in St. Boniface, Manitoba. Wonder if he saw the back of the clipping, which contained the observation: "These days, a girl has to work like a horse to get a groom" . . . And, speaking of traffic safety, Carroll L. Zimmerman of 6104 Kilmer st., Cheverly, Md., takes me to task for saying that one should give an arm signal before pulling out of a parking place. Carroll says: "I'm ashamed of you. You're giving comfort to people who think that all they have to do is give a signal. Wouldn't it be better if they looked too?" . . . Sure it would, Carroll, but we take it for granted that people who drive will keep their eyes open at all times . . . Collecting match folders must be quite a hobby. M. E. Morgan of 740 N. Market st., Frederick, Md., recently reported the theft of a suitcase containing $400 worth of the match covers. When that news story appeared here, Lowell Lomax of 1118 Rhode Island ave. nw., who sells advertising matches, sent District Liner Morgan a folder, to help him begin a new collection. By return mail, Lomax got a cover in repayment, from Morgan . . . And here I am, still stuck with the baseball pictures that come with my bubble gum.

IN AND OUTER

Have you heard about the drunk who staggered up to the policeman and said:

"Say, officer, can you tell me how to get to the Alcoholics Anonymous office?"

Taking in the stew's condition at a glance, the cop remarked: "You want to sign up, eh?"

"Sign up," echoed the inebriate indignantly, "I should say not. I want to resign."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Several puppies, part cocker spaniel, part fox terrier." (Wisconsin 4492.)

"Mother cat and kitten." (Franklin 3764).

"Housebroken female kittens, 10 weeks old." (Axminster 5762).

"Beautifully marked 9-week-old kittens; weaned and housebroken." (Emerson 7889).

"Cats and kittens of all colors." (Owens 6316).

"Registered 15-month-old Doberman pinscher female needs someone who will love her as we do; she'd prefer lonesome man or woman on large estate or farm. The Army thinks we should see Germany." (Engleside 34-J-2, Engleside, Va.).

OLD-TIMERS CORNER

I was talking to a Capital Transit executive the other day and was told that the company had 4700 employes.

"Of that number," I was asked, "how many would you guess have been with the company for 25 years or more?"

"Well," I guessed, "you probably have quite a few old-timers. Maybe a hundred or so."

The correct answer, I was astonished to learn, is 660. A dozen or so have 50 years of service to their credit.

They remind me of John Riseling, night city editor of The Washington Post, who came here as a temporary employe in 1922 to take a two-week fill-in job.

John says he's still trying to make up his mind whether he'll stay and become a permanent employe.

GHOTI REVISITED

Our recent demonstration that, phonetically, "ghoti" spells "fish," results now in another example of absurd English spellings.

Psoloquoise should be pronounced with the ps as in psychology, the olo as in colonel, the qu as in bouquet and the oise as in tortoise.

The result is "circus."

UNIVERSAL

Scientists are going to try to figure out the meaning of radio and radar messages which have been reaching the earth from some place out in space.

When the messages are decoded, we'll probably find that they say:

"Dear Earth: Do you have any vacant two-bedroom apartments down your way? If you do, please contact Juniper Q. Baredome, Housing Expediter for Mars."

NOT MARTIAL; MARITAL

The postwar world is neither in a state of war nor a state of peace! It's something in between —like the state of matrimony.

"I'm batting 100 per cent," said Ross, for all six of his contributions were accepted. He received $3 for the first one, and $5 for the next five. "I'm the only one who made money out of a campaign trip," he added, "that is, without playing poker."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Appeal to Soviet People Studied

By Drew Pearson

For the past two weeks President Truman and his advisers have been giving a lot of thought to ways and means of getting the dynamite-laden Russo-American crisis out of the hands of the diplomats and putting it on a people-to-people basis.

Pearson

In brief, it is proposed that Mr. Truman make an appeal direct to Stalin in which he would emphasize that the world can never have peace if one nation refuses to let its people make friends with the rest of the world.

Behind the idea for such an appeal is the belief that our Russian problems must be lifted above the heads of the diplomats if they are to get anywhere.

The diplomats can keep on arguing about Russian currency, zones of Germany, and bizonal problems for weeks and months. And, with each passing week, the world's hope for peace sinks deeper into the slough of world despond.

The military may be able to keep up the miraculous job of flying food into Berlin all winter; and yet when the winter is over we still won't be anywhere nearer an understanding with Russia.

We can also keep on pouring money into western Europe under the Marshall Plan. Yet at the end of five years we shall still be in a dangerous stalemate with the Kremlin if there continues to be an airtight, ironclad curtain preventing all friendship between the American and Russian people.

Road to Bankruptcy

Take, for instance, the new lend-lease military budget for western Europe revealed in this column last week. United States national defense chiefs are now planning to ask Congress for about five billions to arm England, France and the Benelux countries against attack by the Red army.

This five billion is for one year alone. And it will be on top of five billion for the Marshall Plan, plus 12 billion for United States military defense, plus all domestic expenditures, making a budget that must eventually throw American economy dangerously out of balance.

This, of course, is just what the Russians are aiming at. A depression, a bankrupt U. S. A. is just as good to them as an American defeat in war—in fact, better, because in a depression Russia wouldn't have to do any fighting.

All of which is why White House advisers at long last are warning that the country has reached a diplomatic deadend, and that somehow or other we must penetrate the Iron Curtain to win a permanent safeguard for peace—friendship with the Russian people.

Real U. S. Friendship

In the past, the American people have sent the Friendship Train to Europe, mailed millions of democracy letters to the people of western Europe, given millions of dollars in CARE packages, and shown their genuine friendship in all sorts of ways. But they have never been able to register that friendship with the Russian people. The Iron Curtain has been too rigid.

Nor has the United States Government, except by the Voice of America, taken any important step to convince the Russian people that we are a friendly, peace-loving country and the last people in the world to want war.

While Mr. Truman's appeal to Stalin—if made—may fall on barren ground, nothing worth while in life is accomplished without trying. And when the world faces the tragic spectacle of another world war, then we should probe every possible avenue of peace until the very end.

Minimum Wages

Buried deep in a recent congressional report is a neglected item affecting the wages of about 30 million Americans. It is a one-sentence brush-off that the Republican Congress gives to its 1946 campaign promise to raise minimum wages above 40 cents an hour.

The story is buried deep in the inner pages of a Senate Labor Committee report, just off the press.

In 1946, both parties made thee same pledge to labor to boost minimum wages. Carrying out this pledge for the Democrats, Utah's Senator Elbert Thomas introduced a bill in the Eightieth Congress, lifting the minimum hourly wage to 75 cents. Several Republicans complained that 60 cents was enough, but they did nothing even to raise the minimum that much. The bill was stymied in Senator Taft's Labor Committee.

Last week the Senate Labor Committee explained what happened to the minimum wage legislation: Due to the far-reaching and complex problems involved in the pending legislation," it said, "the subcommittee was not able to complete a final draft of the proposed bill before Congress adjourned."

Meanwhile the minimum wage in the United States is still $16 for a 40-hour week.

THIS WEEK THE HECHT COMPANY SALUTES THE

Interstate Commerce Commission

and its people who safeguard our country's arteries of commerce

• The Interstate Commerce Commission . . . has jurisdiction covering virtually all modes of public transportation . . . except transportation by air. Under the general control of the Commission are railroads, shipping companies, trucking concerns, pipe lines, express companies, private car lines, sleeping car companies and freight forwarders.

• The Interstate Commerce Commission . . . was created in 1887 . . . with jurisdiction covering only interstate commerce by rail . . . or interstate commerce carried on partly by rail and partly by water. Since that time, the Commission has been granted increased powers . . . and today plays a much more important part in our national life.

• The Interstate Commerce Commission . . . employs over two thousand persons . . . fifteen hundred of them here in Washington . . . to carry out its many complex and exacting responsibilities. For administrative purposes . . . the Commission is divided into five divisions and fifteen bureaus.

• The Interstate Commerce Commission . . . maintains a Bureau of Safety . . . which inquires into the cause of every accident coming under the jurisdiction of the Commission . . . and formulates rules and regulations designed to lower the accident rate in the future. This results in higher safety standards on our highways and railroads . . . to the benefit of all of us.

A healthy, free-flowing commerce means a healthy economy . . . humming factories . . . busy market places . . . a prosperous and confident people. To keep open the arteries of our nation . . . to insure the rapid and easy interchange of goods . . . is the trust of our two thousand good friends of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Commerce is the lifeblood of our country . . . coursing along vast networks of highways, railways and waterways. Oregon salmon are shipped to the East Coast . . .
